PREFACE.

In writing the sketches of the Old Historic families of Marshfield, I have taken especial pains to be as accurate as possible in my descriptions, but as there are comparatively few genealogies of Marshfield families published, I was obliged to go to the homes of these families and interview them, and find out what they knew about their ancestors. Some could not go back farther than the Revolution, which included their grandfathers, and with some their great-grandfathers. An account of these generations, some had written in their Bibles, and some recited from memory the account of their ancestry from generation to generation. Many whom I interviewed could trace their ancestry back to the old colonial days of the Pilgrims, and I was much surprised to find so many now living in Marshfield who had descended from the old colonial families living here in 1630, 1635, and 1650. And what Wm. T. Davis, Esq., Plymouth's noted historian, said at our "Old Home Week's festivities last summer, that "Marshfield stood next to Plymouth in historic importance in relation to the colonists and Pilgrims of that early period, I found to be true.

I have also included sketches from the soldiers of their experience and observations during the Civil War. Most of them have responded to my invitation. Some have not. I have given all a chance.

There are a very few families in town that I have not been able to get any account of their ancestry. Either they have not kept any track of their ancestors, or take no interest in their family history.

Some of the records of marriages of early settlers did not give the surnames of the wives before marriage, and a great many dates of births and deaths could not be traced.

I desire to credit the following for their voluntary offering in furnishing me sketches of their families and other families with whom they were familiar.

Mrs. Emma M. C. and Miss Amy Bates, Mrs. Sarah Bosworth of Pembroke, Mr. E. E. Williamson, Mrs. J. H. Bourne, Miss Mary Tilden, Mrs. Nellie Ewell Vining, Miss Grace Hatch, Franklin W. Hatch, Rev. A. M. Sherman, J. H. Eames, Mrs. Rosella Taylor, Vernon Briggs' book, Dr. Azel Ames, C. Porter Wright, Walter Clift, Will Sprague, M. Herman Kent, Col. H. A. Oakman, Elisha Sprague, Miss Sarah E. Leonard, Mrs. Louisa A. Sprague, and others interviewed who gave a brief account of their families.

EXPLANATION.

It will be necessary to explain some of the figures used in the family sketches, that the reader may more readily understand the genealogical method in tracing the generations of each family and the children's place therein. The Roman numerals used, (such as IV.) designate the number of children of the head of each family, and numbered in the order of their birth. The small, common numbers, after the name of each child, and above it, designate the generation to which they belong. For example, "James⁵" belongs to the fifth generation from the starting point, not necessarily in every instance from the Pilgrim or colonial ancestor, because some ancestors did not come to Marshfield for three or four generations after the Pilgrims, and some families cannot be traced back farther than the revolution. So if the record of a family cannot be found earlier than say, 1778, the generations will be reckoned from there. That being the first, and the next generation of children the second, and so on.

The record at the head of each family or generation, such as John Smith,⁵ I trace back to the first ancestor, for example, John Smith's⁵ father, and grandfather and great grandfather, and so on to the first ancestor, and is put down as follows: (William,¹ John's father, is in the fourth generation, and John's grandfather, Caleb,³ is down as the third generation, and John's,⁵ great grandfather, Thomas,²) is down as the second generation, and his first ancestor, Peter,¹ is down as the first generation. And as is sometimes the case in some families, there are as many as eight or nine generations to the present list or generation of children. The above family will read in brief: (William,⁴ Caleb,³ Thomas,² Peter,¹) and that gives John Smith's ancestry back to the first ancestor. I have endeavored to give the record in each case in all the families, where possible, throughout the history that the reader can tell in each instance at once, without further reference, each generation back to his first ancestor recorded.

ABBREVIATIONS.

b. stands for born—d for died—m. or mar. for married—unm. for unmarried—w. or wi. for wife—dau. for daughter—col. for colonial—ances. for ancestor—res. for resides—hus. for husband.

History of Marshfield.

WEATHERBEE.

One of the prominent families of Marshfield for the past half century bears the name of Weatherbee.

George H. Wetherbee,¹ father of our present Town Treasurer, was born February 17, 1806, in Billerica, Mass. He went to Boston when fifteen years of age as an employe in the Paterson Hotel on Elm street, later known as Wilde's Tavern. He afterwards engaged in the ready-made clothing business with his brother, Elijah T., on the corner of Summer and Federal street, and was one of the earliest clothiers in Boston. After gaining a fair competency, he retired and came to East Marshfield; bought the farm and house owned and built by Danforth Hall in 1822. A few years later in 1840, he engaged in a general store business in the building adjoining his house. In 1852 he purchased a portion of the Jedediah Little estate at Little-town, now known as Sea View, and built a store on the premises. This was occupied the following year (1853) by his son, George H., Jr., where he carried on a general store business.

In 1849 George H., senior, sold out his store business at East Marshfield, now known as Marshfield Hills, to W. and C. Ames, who continued at this stand about three years, and then sold to Elisha W. Hall. Mr. Weatherbee, senior, then moved with his family to his house in Sea View, where he resided three years, and then removed to Scituate (part known as Greenbush) where he built a house (now occupied by his son, John Weatherbee) in which he resided the remainder of his life. He also built a store near his house where his son John kept a general store for the period of about five years. He died in 1877, October 9, in the 71st year of his age. He married Sarah B. Clapp, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Nehemiah Thomas. They had ten children.

George H., Jr.,² b. Nov. 29, 1831. After running the store at Sea View a few years, entered into partnership with Elisha W. Hall at the new store built by his father at East Marshfield, now occupied by Winthrop Hall. After remaining in the firm some six years, the partnership was dissolved, and he carried on the store business alone at the old stand adjoining the house where he now resides. He continued here in the business many years. Some ten years ago he was chosen Town Clerk and Treasurer and has served continually in those offices, ably and faithfully, by the unanimous vote of the town to the present time. He also served six years as a member on the board of school committee. He married Martha Bartlett of Plymouth.

TILDEN.

Elder Nath'l Tilden¹ was the ancestor of nearly all the Tildens in Marshfield. He was one of three brothers, and they were called "Men of Kent," from England. He came to Scituate¹ at that portion called "Two Mile" tract, now known as North Marshfield, in 1628. His farm extended both sides of North River, part of it being on "Gravelly beach." There is no record of the date of his birth, or marriage.

(See particulars of bequest to church in Richards' 1st vol., History of Marshfield.)

The above Hatch Tilden,⁷ father of Henry, built the house recently occupied by his 4 unmarried daughters, Dec. 8, 1808. It was built partially for a toll house near the Union bridge by Hatch Tilden. Union bridge, over North River, was built Mch. 20, 1800. The charter gave the owners power to collect tolls to the amount of the value of the bridge, and all the expenses thereon. Interest at 7 per cent. paid annually. After which, to be the property of the towns of Marshfield and So. Scituate, (now Norwell,) to be supported by them as a public highway. John Tolman was the first toll-keeper, and he continued in that capacity until 1808, when said Hatch Tilden was married and built said house in 1808. He accepted the office of toll-keeper and continued in that office until the bridge was made free at midnight Apr. 1, 1850. Quite a jubilee was held over the event at 12 m. Guns were fired, bells rung and huzzas given by the crowd assembled.

John Tolman (the first toll-keeper) lived in a house near the bridge, at high water mark. The house was torn down many years ago. The top of the bridge was newly built in June, 1865, and the present steel bridge was built in 1899 by Marshfield and Norwell.

The late Samuel J. Tilden of New York city, the unsuccessful democratic candidate for President in 1876, and by that party considered elected, instead of Pres. R. B. Hayes, was a descendant of the above colonial ancestor, Elder Nathaniel, and branched from one of the Samuel ancestors.

Another branch, No. 2, of the same ancestor, Elder Nathaniel Tilden :

Joshua Tilden, the great grandfather of Capt. Chas. L. Tilden, now living at 85 years of age. Joshua lived in the house (a portion of which is now standing) now occupied by Mr. Batcheller on Corringdon's Hill so called.

By the following document, which I copied from the original in the possession of Capt. Tilden, his lineal descendant, it will be seen he lived in the days of slavery, when it was lawful to hold slaves in Massachusetts.

"To all people unto whome the present Bill of Sale shall come: Joshua Tilden of Marshfield, in the county of Plymouth and State of ye Massachusetts Bay in New England, Yeoman, Sendeth greeting: Know ye that I the said Joshua Tilden, for and in consideration of the sum of Three Spanish milled Dollars to me in hand at and before the cancelling and delivery hereof, well and truly paid by Benjamin Hiland of Marshfield, in the county of Plymouth, Aforesaid Laborer. The Receipt whereof I hereby acknowledge have given, granted, Bargained and sold, and by these Presents do fully and absolutely give, grant, Bargain and sell unto the saide Benjamin Hiland, a negro girl named Rozza to him and his only propper use, Benefit and Behoof forever, and I the said Joshua Tilden for myself, my Heairs, Executors and Administrators do hereby covenant, Promise and agree That at ye time of the cancelling and until the Delivery, hear I am the true and lawful owner of the above said negro Girl, and I the said Joshua Tilden for myself, my heirs, Executors and Administrators do furthermore covenant, Promise and agree to warrant and defend, the negro girl, as aforesaid unto the sd Benjamin Hiland forever against ye lawful Girl aforesaid unto the sd Benjamin Hiland forever against ye Lawful claims and Demands of all and every Person and Persons whomsoever. In witness whereof I have hereunto sot my hand and Seal this fourth Day of November One thousand seven hundred and eighty-three, and in the Eighth year of the American Independence 1783.

“Signed, Joshua Tilden.

“Signed, Sealed and Delivered in the presence of us:

Sylvanus White,

“Sarah White, Descendants of Peregrine White.”

Received on ye day of ye Date above three Spanish Milled Dollars of Benjamin Hiland, it Being the full consideration Above mentioned for me.”

“Signed, Joshua Tilden.”

Above Joshua Tilden married Phebe Wales, dau. of Rev. Atherton Wales, who preached in the Unitarian church, Ea. Marshfield, during the days of the “Revolution” for half a century, beginning about 1740. Said Wales is buried in the Ed. Little lot, surrounded by an Arbor Vitæ hedge, in the Unitarian cemetery, on the easterly side of the church.

Another branch of the Tildens No. 3. The John Tilden branch.

We find the name of John Tilden mentioned in W. T.
Davis Plymouth Co. History as a tory, and in company with a half dozen others was imprisoned in the Plymouth Jail for their toryism, and released by order of council in

Oct., 1776, on condition that they would pay the expenses of proceedings against them and remain on their estates, except for the purpose of attending worship on the Sabbath. We think he must have outgrown his toryism, for some 4 years later, in 1780, we find "Dea. John Tilden as one of a committee to assist Capt. Clift and Capt. Dingley in procuring 18 men to join the Continental Army for the term of 6 months." He, we suppose, was the father of

John Tilden² (familiarily called "Uncle John Tilden")

KENELM WINSLOW.

Brother of Governor Edward Winslow, the Pilgrim. Descendants in Marshfield.

Most of the living descendants in Marshfield came from Kenelm.¹ None to my knowledge, however, now living here, bear the name of Winslow, but there are many descendants bearing other names.

*Kenelm*¹ was b. in England in 1599. He came over it is considered in 1629 in the Mayflower (2nd voyage). He settled in Marshfield in 1641, near the Carswell estate of his brother Edward. His trade was a joiner. He was a Deputy or Representative to General Court for eight years. He married Eleanor Adams in 1634. He d. in Salem, probably when on a visit in 1672. Children born in Marshfield: I, Kenelm,² b. about 1635. II. Eleanor,² b. about 1637. III. Nathaniel,² b. 1639. IV. Job,² b. about 1641.

Kenelm.² Removed early in life to Yarmouth, Mass, which afterward was incorporated with Harwich, but is now Brewster.

Nathaniel,² b. 1639, d. 1719. He mar. in 1664 Faith Miller. He was captain of the militia, selectman, deputy to Plymouth Court, and representative three times after the union of the colonies.

CHILDREN.

I. Faith,³ b. in 1665. II. Nathaniel,³ b. 1667. III. James,³ b. 1669. IV. Gilbert,³ b. 1673. V. Kenelm,³ b. 1675. VI. Eleanor,³ b. 1677. VII. Josiah,³ b. 1681. VIII. Josias, b. 1683 or 1684. All born in Marshfield.

Job,² son of Kenelm,¹ b. 1641, d. 1720. He removed to Rochester, then to Freetown. He was a lieutenant in the militia. His occupation was a shipwright.

Gilbert,³ (Nathaniel,² Kenelm,¹) b. in Marshfield in 1673. d. 1731. Mar. Mercy Snow in 1698, a great granddaughter of Richard Warren, the Pilgrim.

CHILDREN.

I. Snow,⁵ b. 1729, d. 1810. II. Lydia,⁵ b. 1731, d. 1816, unmar. III. Josiah,⁵ b. 1733, d. 1773. Mar. Penelope Kent. IV. Deborah, b. 1736. Mar. 1773 Joseph Waterman.

The following inscription is copied from the gravestone of Snow and Lydia :

“Here a brother and sister lie;
 Who lived in love and sympathy.
 For near four score years together
 Nature’s summons call^d them hither.
 They paid the debt and now are free,
 As all of us will shortly be.
 For here the wicked are no pest,
 And in the graves no weariness,
 No joy, no grief, no hope, no fear
 Affect Brother and Sister here.”

Nathaniel⁴ (Kenelm,³ Nathaniel,² Kenelm¹) b. 1709, d. 1786. He was a farmer and lived and owned the Snow estate in Marshfield and left at his decease a large landed estate to his only surviving child, Mrs. Ruth Wadsworth, who was considered quite an heiress in those days. He lost the rest of his children by the throat distemper, which was prevalent in New England at that period. He mar. Lydia Ford in 1716.

*Abiah*⁴, b. 1722, d. 1809. She mar. in 1791, Dea. Nehemiah Thomas. He was b. in 1712. He resided on a farm west from the parsonage in Marshfield, once owned by Dea. Israel Thomas, in whose family it remained for 3 successive generations. It was later occupied by the late John T. Dingley, Esq., and now, in 1904, by Mr. Severns.

Said Dea. Nehemiah Thomas was a man of sterling worth in the township, and rendered invaluable service in the Amer. Revolution as a counsellor and committeeman, etc. He was a member of the Provincial Congress at Salem and Concord. In 1775 he was a delegate to the Assembly held at Watertown and was chosen to the Great and General Court held in the meeting house at that place. He d. in 1782. He was town clerk of Marshfield for over 30 years. He was a tanner and farmer. They had 12 children. See children under Thomas family.

*Job*⁴ (Gilbert,³ Nathaniel,² Kenelm,¹) b. 1715, d. 1787. Mar., 1740, Elizabeth Macomber. Had: I. Mercy.⁵

*Anthony*⁴ (Gilbert,³ Nathaniel,² Kenelm,¹) b. 1707, d. 1789, in Bridgewater. He was a blacksmith. Resided in Marshfield. Mar. Deborah Barker in 1729.

*Kenelm*⁴ (Kenelm,³ Nathaniel,² Kenelm,¹) b. 1716, d. 1780. Inherited the homestead of his colonial ancestor, Kenelm¹ and lost his estate by becoming surety for his brother Joseph Winslow, and passed from the family. It was purchased by Asa Waterman, Esq., (father of Capt. Asa Waterman) and then it was sold to Capt. Curtis Goodsell of East Boston, lately deceased, whose wife was a descendant of Ellen Winslow, who mar. Samuel Barker in 1656.

CHILDREN.

I. Kenelm,⁵ b. 1756. II. Abigail,⁵ b. 1758. III. Joseph,⁵ b. 1760.

There are no descendants of Gov. Edward Winslow living in Marshfield to my knowledge. Quite a number of descendants of Kenelm¹ bearing other surnames are living in Marshfield, among them being Franklin Winslow Hatch, Mrs. Albert Bates, George and Frank Carver, children of the late Mrs. Geo. Sumner Damon, Al. Keen, and others.

LAPHAM.

The ancestor of the Laphams in Marshfield came to Scituate before 1635, from county of Kent, England.

Benjamin White,⁴ before mentioned, removed from the Ferry to the homestead of his father-in-law, Gideon Thomas, which became the homestead of his grandson, Thomas Foster White. Benj. White⁴ was not a robust man, but was both active and useful during that revolutionary period which tried so sorely men's souls and bodies. Marshfield numbered more than 300 loyalists. Mr. White represented the town in the Provincial Congress in 1774. John Hancock, President. He was one of the committee of correspondence. Was acting Town Clerk in 1774, when at the petition of the loyalists Gen. Balfour (British General) marched his Queen's guards into their quarters in town, and British vessels were at anchor outside to protect them, as they said, "from their rebel neighbors." Then these rebels knew the town's supply of powder was in danger, being stored in a bedroom of Capt. William Thomas's house. Then Mr. White, with some neighbors, took ox carts (no spring wagons then) and during the quiet and darkness of midnight, loaded that powder, carrying it with great care and caution to his barn, even storing some under the bed in the "free room." Mr. White was commissioned to collect the tea after it was voted not to drink it. They stored it in the house of Nehemiah Thomas. Saving the tea at that time did not satisfy those earnest, honest whigs, so they took this confiscated article and carried it into a nearby field, where there was a large rock, "flatt on ye top," pouring it thereon, and then Mr. White and his brother-in-law, Jeremiah Low, (two staunch old whigs,) applied the torch amid rejoicings.

At a town meeting held in Marshfield, June 19, 1776, it was voted to send certain instructions to Nehemiah Thomas, their Representative to General Court, these instructions, Benj. White, acting Town Clerk, put into form, which was accepted and sent as specified.

It has been called the "First Declaration of Independence." (See a copy of it in Richards' 1st vol., History of Marshfield.) Mr. White lived to see his country free and independent. He died of consumption in 1783. His widow was a worthy descendant of Gov. Bradford, who survived Mr. White until 1808.

Another branch of the Whites is the Warren White branch on Pleasant street..

James White, a direct lineal descendant of Peregrine, and grandfather of living Warren F. White (ex-soldier) lived near the residence of said Warren F., and owned on that street land from the old Israel and Silas Carver place, now Mr. Whidden's, including all the farms and places on the street to the railroad bridge. He had three sons, John, Warren and Martin White. Warren F. and Gustavus (unmar.) are the sons of Warren. Warren F. had two children, Arthur, b. Aug. 27, 1870, deceased, and Rosie, b. May 31, 1868. Mar. Edgar L. Hitchcock, station master at Marshfield Hills.

MACOMBER.

William Macomber¹ (The Colonial ancestor of the Maccombers,) came from England in the second ship after the "Mayflower," probably the ship "Ann." He mar. Peregrine White's cousin, Ruth White.

Thomas,² son of above William, mar. dau. of Daniel White, son of Peregrine. He held the original grant of the farm when the town was first incorporated.

The Macomers from Colonial days to the latter part of the 19th century, were identified in town affairs. Thomas Macomber¹ was chosen the first Town Treasurer after the union of the colonies. William was Town Clerk from 1784 to 1786.

The Macomers were Town Treasurers for many years. Chas. W. Macomber was Town Treasurer for 17 years, and selectman for a number of years. William Macomber² was commissioned an ensign by Gov. Hutchinson (the King's Governor) in 1772. The document is held by Herbert I. Macomber, a living descendant in 1904. He was a tory during the revolution, but was not molested. The farm now known as the Macomber farm has been continued in the possession of the family from the original grant in colonial days to the present time.

WILLIAMSON.

Timothy Williamson settled in Marshfield about 1643. Mar. Mary Howland, dau. of Arthur Howland, Senior, and d. Aug. 6, 1676, in King Philip's war. His grave seems to be unknown. His will is on file in Plymouth, made June 20, 1676, just before he left to engage in the Indian war. It is as follows: "This writing certifieth to whom it may concern, that I, Timothy Williamson, Senior, being called to God's providence to serve in the wars against the enemy, and not knowing whether I may return again, declare that it is my Will and Testament that my beloved wife enjoy whatever is mine, both houses, lands and cattle, at her proper dispose, only the forty acres of upland given me by the Towne; on the north of the south meder. I bequeathe to my son Timothy, and also will that for a year or two, if he change his estate and be not better provided; he have one of the rooms of my house to live in. The whole property remaining his mother's for the bringing up of the children.

"Witness my hand this twentyeth day of June, 1676.

"The Mark (X) of Timothy Williamson.

In presence of

"Samuel Thomas,

"Nathaniel Thomas.

"Attest:

"Wm. S. Danforth,

"Register of Deeds."

He donated to the town a parcel of land as a training field, now known as the triangular common at Marshfield, front of the 1st Congregational church. He was surveyor of the highways, constable and a freeman.

In Marcia A. Thomas' "Memorials of Marshfield," on page 75, she traces the Williamson family to Master Geo. Williamson, who met King Massasoit at the brook with Capt. Myles Standish, but who "Master George" is, is still a problem. The clear line of descent, however, may be easily traced to Timothy above mentioned as settling here in 1643.

*Nathan*² was his son. Mar. Mary Sprague, dau. of Secretary Sprague.

*Samuel*³ (Nathaniel,² Timothy,¹) b. Aug. 3, 1699.

Commonwealth; asst. weigher, and later asst. storekeeper in Bos. Custom House; literary editor for Lee & Shephard Publishing House. He is now (1904) serving in the pay office in the Boston Navy Yard. He has delivered many political campaign and lyceum lectures through New England and other parts of the country. His children are: 1, Edward R., b. June 17, 1864; 2, Carlotta, b. June 17, 1869.

EWELL.

Henry Ewell,¹ the Colonial ancestor of the Ewells, was from Sandwich, in county Kent, England. He was a shoemaker, and came over in the ship "Hercules," Capt. John Wetherby, in March, 1634. He settled in Scituate, and was a member of Dr. Lothrop's church. His name appears in an original manuscript, dated 1636, written by Rev. John Lothrop. In 1637 he volunteered and enlisted as a soldier in the Pequod war. He was a freeman in 1638. In 1639-40, he removed to Barnstable, Mass., with Dr. Lothrop, Anthony Anable, and others. In Nov., 1638, he mar. at Green Harbor, Sarah Anable, dau. of Anthony Anable and his wife Jane, who came over from England in the ship "Ann," in 1623, bringing their daughter Sarah with them. Henry Ewell, the above ancestor, returned to Scituate and died there in 1697. His farm was on the east side of Walnut Tree Hill, near the Amos Town and Shaw place, in Greenbush, Mass, back of Northey's. His house was burned by the Indians in 1676. He sold to the Society of Friends land for a meeting house in 1678.

CHILDREN.

I. Major Briggs.⁵ Mar. Abigail Thomas. II. Judah.⁵ Mar. Hannah Thomas. III. Waterman.⁵ Mar. Sarah Dexter of Providence, R. I., removed to Waldoborough, Me. Col. Anthony,⁵ the father, d. July 14., 1781. His homestead was the scene of that gathering of "sturdy yeomanry," after Gen. Balfour, the Britisher, and his Queen's guards had taken up quarters at Nathaniel R. Thomas at the request of the Loyalists to protect them from their "rebel neighbors." It was there they formed in line, armed with whatever they could get, but in dead earnest, as they marched down back of the house over "Solomon's Run," the rendezvous of the British, who were informed of their coming, took flight to their boats, off Brant Rock, but not as they had come on that bright sunny day in January, with their red coats and guns glittering in the sunshine, as they marched up in pomp and splendor from the ferry."

Major Briggs, son of above Col. Anthony (Anthony,⁴ John,³ Samuel,² John,¹) born on the homestead. Married Abigail, dau. of Nehemiah and Abiah (Winslow) Thomas in 1779. She was b. Mch. 12, 1743. They removed and made for themselves a home on the Ancient "Beadle estate," near Brant Rock. There is a ledge of rocks near there called the "Beadle Rocks." Some years ago it was the mouth of North River.

CHILDREN.

I. Waterman.⁶ Married Sarah Deering, dau. of Capt. John and Lucy (Baker) Thomas. (Thus uniting the Thomas lines in Marshfield.) II. Lucy.⁶ Married Nathaniel Pratt of East Bridgewater. III. Abiah.⁶ Married Israel Hatch of No. Marshfield. IV. Abigail.⁶ Married Isaac Paine. Settled in Marshfield.

Major Briggs, the father, d. July 15, 1833. He was a Revolutionary soldier; one of those who signed that pledge not to drink tea until the tax was removed—a pledge which he faithfully kept. His son, Waterman, succeeded to the estate. Had: 1, John,⁷ who married and settled in Boston. 2, Sarah Ann, who married Elijah, son of Elijah and Abigail (Ford) Ames, and their children still own the homestead.

"Mr." Judah,⁵ son of Col. Anthony Thomas, succeeded to the historic homestead. Mar. Hannah, dau. of Nehemiah and Abiah (Winslow) Thomas. She was b. July 22, 1760.

CHILDREN.

I. Anthony.⁶ Married Lydia, dau. of Elisha and Lydia (Turner) Ford. Settled on the Holmes estate adjoining his father's. Had: 1, Pursis,⁷ d. young. 2, Avis,⁷ d. young. 3, Olive.⁷ Married Chas. Sampson, son of Chas. and Sarah (Thomas) Sampson of Waldborough, Me., and succeeded to the estate which their son Frank T. Sampson sold, as he was obliged to go West for his health. Anthony Thomas was a school teacher for many years.

II. Alden.⁶ succeeded to the homestead, where he d. unmarried. Before his death he had purchased a tomb for his individual entombment, with full instructions, which were carried out, but since then the tomb has become the spoil of ghoulish vandals. Anthony and Alden Thomas were gentlemen with all the old time courtesy of manners. I enjoyed many and very pleasant remembrances of them.

III. Olive.⁶ Married Gideon T., son of Dea. Gideon Thomas Harlow and wife Patience (Ford) Ames. Settled in Duxbury, but had two children in Marshfield, viz: 1, John A. Harlow, who married Frances, dau. of Nathaniel Turner of Scituate. Mr. Harlow died, and Mrs. Harlow and their son Frank, reside on the homestead at Marshfield Neck. 2, Olive T.⁷ Mar. Thos. B. Blackman. Res. Brant Rock.

IV. Althea.⁶ Mar. Eleazer, son of Dea. Thomas Harlow. Settled in Marshfield. Had: 1, Judah.⁷ Mar. Olive Walker, Nov. 27, 1833. 2, Henry,⁷ d. in infancy. 3, Briggs. Mar. Judith, dau. of Galen Weston. 4, Alden, b. 1824. Mar. Temperance, dau. of Proctor and Temperance (Thomas) Bourne, and were the last residents and owners of the homestead. They sold it to Mr. Hackett, removing to Needham, Mass. Eleazer Harlow d. Feb. 14, 1857, age 72. His wife d. Feb. 3, 1857.

Gen. John,⁴ (John,³ Samuel,² John,¹) b. 1724. Mar. Hannah, dau. of Nathaniel, and 2nd wi. Hannah (Robinson) Thomas (uniting the two Thomas lines). This is one of the sons of Marshfield that should have especial mention. He studied medicine and practiced at Green Harbor (where he succeeded to the estate). He then removed to Kingston, where he practiced successfully, except when connected with the Revolutionary army, where he was much esteemed by Washington, not only for his military qualities, but as a man and friend. His record is wonderful for his unselfishness and worth. Mrs. Bosworth has copies of letters written to him by Gen. Washington.) History tells that on Mch. 4, 1776, he took possession of Dorchester Heights, which caused the evacuation of Boston by the British, etc. After this he started for Canada. His march was attended with much suffering and exhaustion. Reaching the Seoul River he was taken with smallpox and died June 2, 1776, in his 53d year. In 1886 his grave was found and marked. The Indians had kept the place, and it was thus discovered.

CHILDREN.

I. Nathaniel,⁵ b. 1769. II. John,⁵ b. 1766. III. Hannah,⁵ b. 1762. Mar. Rev. Zephemiah Willis of Kingston. Mrs. Thomas, the mother, d. in Kingston in 1819 in her 90th year.

William, "Capt. Willie" of the Revolution. (Nathan,³ Samuel,² John,¹) b. Jan. 31, 1727, son of Nathan and third wife Sarah (Foster) Thomas succeeded to the homestead. Mar. 1st wi., Mary, dau. of Abraham Hill of Malden (where he went to learn the shoemaker's trade).

CHILDREN.

I. William,⁵ b. Sept. 21, 1747. Mar. Abigail Sherman. II. Mary,⁵ b. Feb. 11, 1749. Mar. Abijah Waterman, removed to Maine. III. Nathan,⁵ b. Jan. 18, 1751, d. Dec. 15, 1751. IV. Sarah,⁵ b. Jan. 21, 1753. Mar. Thomas, son of Sam'l and Hannah (Ford) Baker, d. childless, Jan. 6, 1822.

Mrs. Thomas, the mother, d. Mch., 1753. He mar. 2nd wi., Abiah, dau. of Capt. James and Deborah (Sherman) Thomas of Duxbury, Mch. 11, 1754. Had:

V. Deborah,⁵ b. May 28, 1755, d. unmar. age 39. VI. Luther,⁵ b. Jan. 1757. VII. Jesse,⁵ b. Feb. 5, 1760, d. a young man. He was a very enterprising and successful merchant. VIII. Alice,⁵ and IX. Abiah,⁵ b. July 6, 1762. Alice,⁵ d. July 8, 1763. Abiah,⁵ d. Sept. 18, 1768.

William,⁴ ("Capt. Willie") the father, d. a young man, and his young children had guardians appointed. A lower bedroom in his house was where the town's powder and ammunition was stored, and when Gen. Balfour and his Queen's guard marched into town Dec. 20, 1774, to take up quarters at Nat. Ray Thomas' and other Loyalists' houses, they passed almost by the sacred deposit, so the patriots, led by Jeremiah Low and Benj. White, (brothers-in-law) went at midnight with ox teams and removed the precious ammunition to places of safety. Mr. White stored all he could in his own house, even placing it under his bed in the "fore room." I asked Sarah Thomas if she supposed they slept in that bed? Her reply was, "There was not much sleeping at that time, but if it had been necessary, they would have slept in that bed." Some was stored at Joseph Delano's (my great grandfather) at Duxbury, where Herman H. Delano now lives, and some at Wadsworth Chandler's at Duxbury. That was a fearful time when that handful of "yeomanry" were pitted against the aristocracy, and if Gen. Balfour (the Britisher Gen.) and his men had not started as they did, "The soil of Marshfield would have been reddened with the first blood of the Revolution. Capt. William,⁴ or "Willie," was a useful man, and a brave soldier during the Revolutionary War up to his death. On the morning after the battle of Lexington Capt. Thomas fired the signal guns, agreed upon, from the top of Ward Hill (now called Pudding Hill) that the people might know hostilities had commenced. He died not long after. A messenger had ridden all night to bring the news.

Luther,⁵ (William,⁴ Nathan,³ Samuel,² John,¹) son of Captain William and 2nd wife Abiah (Thomas) Thomas, b. Jan. 25, 1757. Succeeded to the homestead. Mar. 1st wi. Rebecca, dau. of Isaac and Rebecca (Phillips) Dingley, 1799.

CHILDREN.

I. Marcia A,⁶ b. Aug. 9, 1800, d. unmar. Sept. 14, 1879, age 79. II. William Foster, b. Jan. 10, 1802, d. unmar.

Mrs. Thomas, the mother, d. 1808, and he mar. 2nd wi., Anna Hewitt, b. 1810. Had:

IV. Luther,⁶ Jr., b. Oct. 1812.

Luther,⁵ the father, d. Apr., 1831, age 75. His widow d. 1837-8. Of his daughters, Marcia and Sarah, we can say that none of their brave, illustrious ancestors acted a better part in life than they. Miss Marcia was the author of a pamphlet entitled "Memorials of Marshfield," in which her sister Sarah was of much assistance. Miss Marcia gathered the broken fragments of William and Nathaniel Thomas' stones, placing them together until she could decipher them. (I was with her.) It was greatly through her exertions and influence that the fair of 1851 was held to raise funds to fence in and preserve the "Old Burying Ground," (sometimes called the "Winslow Burying ground"). And from her not over abundant means, she left a sum of money to erect a monument on that ground "To the memory of the early settlers of Green Harbor," and Miss Sarah (her sister) saw that the will was carried into effect, and the monument erected before her death.

*Luther,*⁶ half brother of Marcia and Sarah (*Luther,*⁵ *William,*⁴ *Nathan,*³ *Samuel,*² *John,*¹) b. Oct., 1812. He succeeded to the estate. (His sisters and brother built a new house for themselves near by). He mar. in 1835 Abigail Tolman, dau. of Andrew and Lydia (Soule) Sampson of Duxbury.

CHILDREN.

I. Anna,⁷ b. June, 1837. Mar. Capt. Smith Taylor of Marshfield (Ferry). Had: 2 children. 1, Edward S.,⁸ and 2, Emily W.,⁸ both married in Framingham, Mass.

Capt. Ichabod, the father, d. in Pembroke, Mch. 2, 1788, age 55. Mrs. Thomas, the mother, d. Oct. 12, 1801, age 60.

Capt. Thomas was a very successful builder, and although his work was not done in Marshfield, yet I think we have the right to put him in the "History of Marshfield" as one of the "Marshfield Boys." He built at the "Brick Kilns" from 1764 to the time of his death. The second vessel he built was the "Beaver," one of the famous vessels from which the tea was thrown in the Boston Harbor, Dec. 16, 1773. He built the "Bedford," which Feb. 6, 1783, arrived with Stars and Stripes flying, and was the first United States flag ever displayed in England. He built the ship "Maria" for a privateer in 1782, but the war closing at this time, she was never used as such. She was in existence in 1867, and fitted out for a whaling vessel. She was used until 1872, when she took fire, condemned and broken up at Vancouver's Island.

The Daniel Webster estate was occupied and owned by Wm. Thomas, the Colonial Ancestor, and his descendants, passing down from William to Nathaniel,² to Nathaniel,³ to Nathaniel,⁴ to John,⁵ to Nathaniel Ray,⁶ the famous tory, to Capt. John,⁷ the last Thomas before mentioned, who occupied and owned the old homestead. It then passed to Daniel Webster, to whom John sold it about 1830, with the privilege of remaining there during life. The old house was destroyed by fire many years ago, and a new one built and occupied by Mrs. Fletcher Webster, but now owned and occupied by Mr. Walton Hall. Mr. Webster was in the habit of coming down summers to board with the Thomases before he purchased the estate.

The other branch of the Thomases, John,¹ the Colonial Ancestor, was not related to William, the other Colonial Ancestor, as far as known. He settled on the estate now owned by the Phillipses. Adelaide Phillips, the celebrated singer, purchased it about 1860 of Capt. Asa Hewitt's heirs, the site of the original house is marked (as heretofore mentioned) by a statue given to Miss Phillips by friends. Col. Anthony Thomas of the Revolution, 4th generation from above Colonial John, lived on the estate on the road from North Duxbury to Brant Rock, below where the Rose Hackett (Carver) house now stands. His grandson, Frank Sampson, was the last of the family to own it. He sold it many years ago, and removed West for his health.

Capt. "Willie" Thomas' (of the Revolution) place was the house the late Luther Thomas tore down and built his new house on the site, near the Marshfield railroad station, at beginning of road leading to Brant Rock in 1860. Marcia, Sarah and William Thomas, the children of their father's first wife, built a house between their half brother Luther's and the cemetery.

Major Briggs Thomas,⁵ son of Col. Anthony,⁴ purchased the Beadle estate near "Beetle's Rocks," already mentioned. It is now owned and occupied by his descendants, children of the late Elijah and Sarah (Thomas) Ames.

CHILDREN.

I. Luke,⁴ William,⁴ and Samuel.⁴

*Samuel*⁴ Hall (Luke,³ Adam,² Adam,¹) b. 1800, d. Nov. 13, 1870. The three brothers built in Marshfield together vessels from 1825 to 1828. In 1827 the Brig Waverly, 232 tons, was built by Samuel, and sold to parties in Plymouth. This was the last of Samuel's building in Marshfield. Luke and William continued building together until 1837, from which time, until 1840, Luke built here alone. In 1837-8 Samuel built on his own account in Duxbury, and in 1839 he removed to East Boston. He began this year the work of preparing a shipyard about where the end of Maverick street is now. His first ship there was built in 1839, and from that date to 1860 he built 110 vessels. Some of them were the largest, fastest and best ships that sailed the seas. In 1847 he was president of the Dry Dock Co. He was president of the East Boston Ferry Co. from the time of its organization in 1852 until it was bought by the city. He was president of the Maverick Bank from its incorporation until his death, Nov. 13, 1870. Mar. 1st wi., Christiana Kent. No children. Mar. 2nd wi., Huldah B. Sherman.

tella L. Litchfield, dau. of Stephen and Irene E. Litchfield of Scituate. Had: Lawrence L., b. June 9, 1900. Another son b. June 12, 1905.

Edgar L. has been superintendent of schools of the district comprising Marshfield, Scituate and Duxbury for the past ten years. He and his family reside in Marshfield Hills.

HENRY.

Dr. Stephen Henry, b. in Stoughton, Mass., Dec. 4, 1829, son of William and Lucy (Tilson) Henry. His mother is of Pilgrim stock. Mar. Jane Weston (deceased) of Marshfield. Had: 1, Helen M., a graduate of Boston Dental College, practicing in her profession at Plymouth, Mass. Dr. Stephen has been engaged in the practice of dentistry in Marshfield since 1861. He has enjoyed the reputation of being one of the most skillful dentists in this region. He is a very intelligent man, and enjoys a knowledge of the sciences. He is one of the leading promoters and proprietors of the Dyke Marsh. The success of that great enterprise is due largely to his foresight and perseverance. Within the past few years they have found that common unslacked lime, applied liberally to the soil, has given those proprietors who have used it some two tons or more hay to the acre.

OAKMAN.

Some genealogical notes of Oakman families, furnished by Col. H. A. Oakman:

The Oakmans of Marshfield are descendants of Samuel

Oakman, who lived in Scarboro, a few miles southwesterly from the site of the present city of Portland. Another name for the place is Spurwink, and it was also known as Oakman's Island. There was an Elias Oakman, who had a son Elias, a contemporary of Samuel. If he had descendants, they have not been traced. Samuel Oakman was in Spurwink as early as 1657. Samuel Oakman¹ had three sons: Samuel,² Josiah,² and Tobias.²

The names of descendants of Samuel² cannot be given with certainty. Josiah,² who had a son Samuel, was ancestor of Oakmans of Lynn and Salem.

There was much fighting with the Indians in what was then called the province of Maine in 1688-9. In 1690 Tobias² was a captive with the Indians. It was apparently soon after his release from this captivity that he moved to Marshfield. This is indicated by Marshfield records giving date of his marriage and dates of births of his children.

York records contain many legal papers in which he is described as "Mariner" and "Coaster." He married Elizabeth Doty, granddaughter of the pilgrim, Edward Doty, (Elizabeth,³ Edward,² Edward¹).

Children of Tobias² Oakman. (Samuel,¹) and Elizabeth (Doty) Oakman.

I. Faith,³ b. May 15, 1697, mar. Benjamin White, grandson of Peregrine White. (Benjamin,³ Daniel,² Peregrine,¹) The first Oakman born in Marshfield marrying grandson of the first born New Englander. Faith (Oakman) White, mar. 2nd, Thos. Foster. She died Dec. 26, 1758.

II. Samuel,³ b. Mch. 15, 1698-9, mar. Elizabeth Hatch, (Elizabeth,³ Walter,² Elder William,¹) children Samuel,⁴ and Tobias.⁴ He died Nov. 21, 1739. She mar. 2nd, David Howard, and 3rd, Peter Ripley. She died Dec. 28, 1788.

III. Elizabeth,³ b. May 10, 1701. Mar. Elisha Ford
Jan. 11, 1719-20.

IV. Sarah,³ b. 1703. Mar. Benjamin Randall of Scituate May 1, 1722.

V. Susanna,³ b. Jan. 1705-6. Mar. Anthony "Collamer."

VI. Mary,³ b. May 3, 17—. Mar. Jedediah Ames. Afterwards mar. — Sherman.

VII. Mercy.³ Mar. Mch. 12, 1740-1, Matthew Simon-ton of County of York. She mar. 2nd, Feb. 5, 1744, John Hamilton of Worcester.

VIII. Edward³ appears to have been the youngest of the family, unless Mercy was born earlier. Chh. records inform us that he died May 28, 1791, "being upwards of 70 years of age." He mar. Sarah, dau. of Samuel and Bethia (Waterman) Dogget. He was executor of his father's (Tobias²) will, presented for probate July 26, 1750.

This will is very valuable for settling several genealogical questions, as the following extracts show: "I give and bequeath unto my grandsons, Samuel Oakman and Tobias Oakman, the sons of my son Samuel, deceased, all my lands at Spurwink River, etc." "To Jedediah Eames, my grandson, is devised twenty pounds, etc." "I bequeath unto my six daughters, Faith Foster, Elizabeth Ford, Sarah Randall, Susanna Collamer, Mary Shairman, and Mary Hamilton, all the rest, etc." "I give and bequeath unto my son Edward Oakman, my cart and wheels, husbandry tools, one-half of my stock of cattle and my negro man Jack." "My son Edward, whom I appoint to be executor."

Edward Oakman lived and brought up his large family on that part of the "Truant" land on which the "Oakman" house now stands. None of his sons remained in Marshfield, and none of the Oakmans now in Marshfield are descended from him.

Children of Edward³ (Tobias,² Samuel,¹) and Sarah:

I. Elizabeth,⁴ b. 20th Sept., 1737; d. unmar. in Marshfield.

II. Bethiah,⁴ b. 10th Dec. 1739. Mar. Wm. Stevens 2nd Jan., 1761.

One, the brig "Silvena," was commanded by his brother, Amos⁴. Others, the schr. Hannah and brig Eliza, were commanded at different times by Samuel Oakman,⁵ Jr. Samuel Oakman was prominent in public affairs and particularly in Revolutionary matters. His wealth was seriously diminished in the war of 1812, when nearly all his vessels, being on the high seas, were captured by the British. Grand elms, now over a century old, set out by him, remain to adorn the street where he built him a home.

VI. Joseph,⁴ b. 28 April, 1749. A sea captain. D. unmar. Grave at Arrowsic Island, Portland harbor.

After his marriage he was engaged in the shipping business, owning in whole or in part a number of large vessels trading with foreign ports. Later he became partner in a wholesale drug firm, doing business on South Market street. After this he went back to railroading and became superintendent, first of the Norfolk Co. road, then the road from Plattsburg to Montreal, and lastly of the Old Colony. All the latter portion of his life, and until the time of his retirement from active business, he was occupied in copper mining, holding the offices of superintendent and treasurer of a number of mines in the Lake Superior district.

EMERY.

Hon. Geo. W. Emery, residing in Marshfield, b. Aug. 13, 1833, in Corinth, near Bangor, Me. Son of Oliver H. and Hannah O. (Porter) Emery. The Ex-Gov. is the 8th generation from the colonial ancestor, Anthony Emery, who came to Boston in the ship "James" in June, 1635. On his mother's side he is of the 8th generation from John Porter, who settled in Hingham in 1635. She was the daughter of Nathaniel Porter of Ipswich, who was a revolutionary soldier. Ex-Gov. Emery was a graduate of Dartmouth, Col. After studying law, he entered the law office of Gen. Benj. F. Butler. In 1869 he was appointed Supervisor of Internal Revenue. The district finally included the states of Tennessee, Kentucky, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and Texas. He had under him more than 2,500 men appointed in Washington. This was in the times of the Kluklux Klan, and days of reconstruction. Pres. Grant was so well satisfied with Mr. Emery's administration of the affairs, he appointed him Governor of Utah (then a territory) in 1875. It was the common saying among them: "It was the Governor against the Mormons," and it was only through him that the Gentiles could expect any legislation favorable to themselves. He was President of Marshfield Ag. and Hor. Soc., and Trustee of N. Eng. Ag. Soc., also member of Marshall P. Wilder Club. Mar. Miss Marcia I. Hall, dau. of Samuel Hall, the famous ship builder of Ea. Boston. Had: 1, Frank H., b. May 6, 1867.

CHAPTER II.

Incidents and anecdotes in ye olden time. Sites of old residences, from one to two hundred years old,

EPITAPHS AND ANCIENT GRAVE STONES IN MARSHFIELD HILLS CEMETERY.

Some historical incidents and sites of forgotten places.

In 1826 citizens of Ea. Marshfield were obliged to mail their letters in Scituate, there being no postoffice here, and the above town was the nearest postoffice at hand.

A letter sent by the late Rev. Geo. Leonard from Harvard College to his father in Marshfield, was superscribed as follows:

“Cambridge, Aug. 21. (Probably 1826.) Paid 6 cents.

“Rev. Elijah Leonard,

“Marshfield,

“By mail no farther than Scituate postoffice.”

The square or corners in front of Mr. Weatherbee's house was called in early times “Holmes Corner,” derived from a Mr. Holmes who occupied a brick house near the residence of Mr. Church Lapham. That spot was also probably an Indian camping ground, as some Indian implements have been found there.

When a boy, our town clerk, Mr. Weatherbee, stood on the door steps of his father's store and saw, many a time, a number of foxes playing on the summit of the “Ridge.” The place is now known as the “Fox Hole.”

“Hannah Ames brook,” at foot of “Patrick's Lane,” is a small water course on North Main street. Hannah Ames lived in what is now woods, beyond the brook, in the early part of last century. The house long ago became a thing of the past.

Joshua Vinal, the rhymer, lived in the early part of the last century in the house now occupied by Henry Carver, the grocer, and formerly owned and occupied by the late Dr. Hagar. He disappeared from home Feb. 28, 1822, and was found dead in a ditch on the Salt Marsh over a week afterwards.

Isaac Rogers, father of the late Charles Rogers, was a clock maker, and lived in the house now occupied by Geo. Carver. He owned all the land on corner of Main and Prospect streets, comprising the land next to the school house, and the land owned by Geo. Carver, Frederick Damon, Mrs. Judson Ewell, Gershom Sherman and Grand Army Hall. His father accumulated considerable property and said to his son during his declining days: "Isaac, don't hoard," and he didn't. This house, built by said Isaac's father, Thomas,⁵ is 150 years old. While he was finishing off a room he worked in Hanover, Mass., walking to his work in the morning and walking home at night, and after supper he worked on his house by lamplight, his wife holding the candle for him.

On another old site, stood a house long ago passed from sight, in the rear of the residence of Mr. Swift, and occupied by Miss Jerusha Rogers, sister to the clock maker, Isaac.

On the land down in the valley through which "Bear's Brook" runs, on the easterly portion of the land, formerly owned by the late Rev. Geo. Leonard, there was a house a century or more ago, occupied by Barnabas Fountain, long since demolished.

On the premises now owned and occupied by Albert Holmes was a store carried on by Danforth Hall. From this store there were stiles radiating in different directions over pastures and stone walls in Ea. Marshfield. One prominent one was across Mr. Weatherbee's land and wall, past Rev. Mr. Leonard's and Corringdon Tilden's to the street, by the late Nathaniel Phillips' residence, at the foot of Batcheller's Hill.

Another site of an ancient house is on the premises of L. S. Richards, in the rear of his residence down by the sand bank near the windmill. On this spot was a house and barn owned and occupied by Timothy Rogers,² a son of John Rogers,¹ the Colonial ancestor of the Rogers' descendants in Marshfield. This was occupied over two centuries ago, and demolished or abandoned probably a century ago. The site was plainly visible, when Mr. Richards bought the place, 30 years ago. There were no public roads near by then, and the old patriarch, finding a good spring near the spot, settled there, as was the custom in those old colonial days. Mr. Richard's children are the 8th generation living on this place. Rogers' branch.

Another old site is on Richards' Hill, on the upper lot of land owned by the late Alvin Rogers. Near the well on this spot was a house owned and occupied by Simeon Rogers, grandfather of the late Clift Rodgers, also by his father, Capt. Luther Rogers. Here were born the late Clift, Wales, Luther and others of the family, nearly a century ago. The house many years ago passed from sight.

Another site on said Hill, is on the upper piece of land of the late Avery Rogers, where the old "Mitchell house" stood, long ago passed away from sight. It is now owned and occupied by Mr. Harmon.

Bear's brook was named after a man named Bear, or Bare, who a century or more ago occupied a house down in the valley below the pond near the brook, long ago demolished.

The house at Sea View, owned and occupied by Luther Little, is a very old house, some 200 years old.

The house in the rear of the Marshfield store, recently occupied by the late Asa Walker, is a very old house.

The house now occupied by Dr. Henry W. Nelson is (a part of it) a very old house. It was built and occupied by the Rogerses in colonial days, who secured a land grant of the king of many acres. The house was a "block house," built in Pilgrim days with a view to protect themselves from the Indians. A portion of the top of the house projected over the main body, and had port holes in it, so that they could fire down upon the Indians if attacked. The house was later occupied by Stephen Rogers and two sisters a century ago. One of the latter became the wife of Nath'l Phillips, the elder, and the other the wife of Ed. Little; later occupied by Moses Rogers, Mr. Drew, Capt. Gardner and Henry Nelson, father of the present occupant, Dr. Nelson.

Another very old house is the residence now owned and occupied by Israel H. Oakman and family, at No. Marshfield. It is said to be 200 years old. Additions have since been made thereto.

The Oakman House, near the Tilden Ames Place, is a century old, or possibly more.

The Damon House on Richard's Hill, formerly occupied by late Thomas Holmes and the Damons, is over a century old.

There are other old houses standing, but these referred to are most prominently in my mind.

Sundry families. Some of the new residents:

On the Corringdon Tilden place (an old landmark) resides Mr. Bachellor and family, a summer resident. They go to Florida in the winter. Mr. Sherman has built an elegant residence on a piece of land in the rear of Dr. Stodder, where he resides in the summer. He is a dry goods merchant in Boston. Mr. Woodard and family reside in the summer at his residence on Pleasant street, near Bear Brook Pond. He is connected with Oliver Ditson Co.'s music store. Mr. Sawyer, a few years ago, bought a place in No.

Marshfield, where he and his family reside through the year. Amasa Bartlett bought the Henry Tilden place at the Hills, where he and his family reside. His wife, Mrs. Helen Bartlett, is a daughter of the late Nath'l Phillips. Mr. Harmon and his son Milton purchased the Avery Rogers' estate recently at the Hills, where they and their families reside.

INTERVIEW.

An interview with a very aged resident, giving an account of his recollection of experiences and observations in Marshfield in his boyhood days during the early part of last century:

"In the war of 1812 we boys lived on bread and milk; no tea. Used candles. I remember the first lamp filled with whale oil. They used tin "petticoat" lamps. Soldiers in the war of 1812 camped down at the Gurnet. They wore stiff leather collars to keep their necks up straight. I recollect Tom Baker coming home. He touched off the cannon that hit the British boat coming into Plymouth, and they retreated without further warning. Remember seeing a "Man of war" from Richard's Hill, stationed off shore to guard the harbor. We used to have pewter plates and platters, and we boys scoured them twice a year. The school house was on the corner where the postoffice is now located. Only one room. Had a teacher who would keep school longest for the money. I recollect one teacher struck Wales Rogers on the side of the head a tremendous blow. I believe Amos Little was the first teacher that I had.

"When peace was declared in the war of 1812, they rung the bells all night, and had plenty of new rum and cider.

“The old Unitarian church was on the site of the present one. We had to go to two services, and right in midwinter. It was cold; not a particle of fire in the church, and we boys, shivering, had to stay and listen to long sermons and prayers. It was considered wicked to have a fire in the meeting house. The church was not tight; holes and cracks let the cold in. Had a sounding board and a high, narrow pulpit, square pews, with a couple of benches for children. It was a large church, and had a broad aisle, and one each side. Some rode horseback with pillions; some rode in a square topped chaise.

“There was no doctor in town when I was a boy,; had to go to Scituate for Dr. James. Later Dr. Macomber was a physician here. He kept private school. They thought he knew a great deal. There used to be a blacksmith shop where Alvin Roger’s barn is. When I was a boy there was one old house where Capt. Chas. L. Tilden lives; another where Dr. Hagar lived, not shingled. Another house opposite Isaac Rogers, two stories, brick ends. Another where Marcellus Rogers lived. Another on the site of Nathaniel Phillips’ house, below Batcheller’s Hill. Another on the site of Batcheller’s house, occupied by Atherton Tilden, the elder.”

INCIDENTS.

In the early days of East Marshfield, (now the Hills,) there were some original and unique characters, and the doings and sayings of some of them are repeated to this day at the firesides of the old settlers.

One is told of Deacon Joel Hatch of the “Two Mile.” Deacon Hatch was one of the deacons of the Unitarian church many years ago, Rev. Mr. Leonard, pastor. In those early days it was the custom of all church goers to attend church on "Fast Day," but Deacon Hatch failed to attend on one of those days, and parson Leonard spoke to him of his absence. "Well," said the deacon, "I will tell you the reason why I didn't attend. (The deacon run a sawmill.) The mill pond has been low for a long time, and a day or two before "fast" the rains filled up the pond, so that I could run the mill, and the question arose whether I had better stay at home and saw a few logs, and give the proceeds of the sale to a poor widow or go to church, and I decided to saw the logs." The parson rather demurred at the decision, and the deacon replied: "Which is worse, stay at home 'fast day' and saw the logs for the benefit of the poor widow, or swap horses on the Sabbath?" The facts were parson Leonard, when he exchanged pulpits with the minister at So. Scituate, (now Norwell,) drove his horse as far as Union bridge, left his team there, and walked over to save horse toll, and took the team on the other side driven by the So. Scituate minister; the latter walked across the bridge, took the team on the Marshfield end left by parson Leonard, and each went their way to the church for which they exchanged, and here was where "swapping horses" on the Sabbath came in.

There was a fellow by the name of Josh. Vinal, who enjoyed some celebrity in making rhymes at short notice, in early days. He called at one time on one Deborah Rogers, living just beyond the "Big Hill," on the ancestral estate of Stephen Rogers. On the place was a cider mill and Josh wanted some cider to drink, but Deborah said no, he couldn't have any. Finally she told him if he would make up some poetry she would give him some. He assented, but before she would give him the cider, she told him he must make the poem, hence he began as follows:

"There stands Deborah, tall and straight,
Ready to enter Heaven's gate."

And there stopped, and said he wouldn't finish the verse until she gave him the cider. Deborah was so pleased at his lines, she consented, and gave him the cider. He then finished the verse as follows:

“Up came Gabriel with a club,
And knocked her down to Beelzebub.”

In early days Betsey Ford's (wife of Asa Ford,) child was punished at the East Marshfield district school, and when it was reported to her, she hastened to the school house, grabbed a stick of cord wood from the wood pile, and went for the master, who was in the school yard. He ran, and she after him with her cord wood stick raised to hit him, but he escaped by running into the school house and locking the door. She followed, and with terrific force she threw the cord stick at the door after him. It passed through the panel, and after a few not altogether classic words addressed to him, she directed her steps homeward, more or less refreshed by the exciting labors of the day.”

Some historical facts concerning the Old Unitarian Church at Marshfield Hills:

THE CHURCH COVENANT.

Signed somewhere between 1732 and 1740.

“We whose names are underwritten do in the presence of God and His holy angels and with all possible solemnity, Covenant and Bind ourselves in manner and form following, that is to say: We do give up ourselves to ye God whose name alone is Jehovah, Father, Son and Holy Ghost, cleaving to God ye Father as our chief and only good, and unto our Lord Jesus Christ as our only Savior, ye Prophet, Priest and King of our salvation, and to ye Spirit of God as our only sanctifier and comforter, and we do give up our selves one unto another. In ye Lord covenanting to walk together as a church of Christ in all ways of his own institution according to ye prescriptions of his holy word. Promising that with all Tenderness and brotherly love, we will faithfully watch over one another's souls and fully yield ourselves to ye Discipline and power of love in his church and attend these Seals and censures, and whatever ordinances Christ has appointed so far faith as ye Lord in word and Spirit hath or shall reveal to us to lead us on; and wherein we fail and come short of duty to return, seeking for pardon and remission, beseeching him to make our spirit steadfast in his covenant, and own us as his church, and covenant people forever. Amen.

“Atherton Wales,
 “Samuel Lapham,
 “John Carver,
 “Thomas White,
 “Joshua Tilden,
 “William Clift,
 “Israel Hatch.”

In about 1740 the church records show that they were having some difficulty with one Samuel Tilden, who was very persistent in singing the “old way,” and by so doing it made bad work with the other singers in the church, as they wanted to sing the “new way.”

The following is a portion of the record:
 “Sept ye 3rd, 1740.

“The church met to see if they could reconcile Brother Samuel Tilden to the regular way of singing psalms, but all persuasions and arguments being of no purpose, they offered him to sing lyt. (lytany) which he called ye old way at commission or to refer ye case to some of ye Gentlemen of ye neighboring ministry, he choosing of them all himself. But he consented to neither.

“Then a committee was appointed to confer with Mr. Tilden to find what reason he had for refusing to sing the new way. He was asked whether he would be easie if ye church would sing at Sacrament that which he called ye old way, which was what you will serve God one part of ye day an ye Devil ye other.

“Ye church met again to see if they could reconcile him, but to no purpose.

“He finally left the church and the communion. One of the reasons being given in 1743. I asked Mr. Wales if he justified all Mr. John Wales delivered in ye pulpit in Marshfield, which was as he said that persons must be changed from ye estate of infancy, or he was not converted. And also he said that every person in ye meeting house had a Devil in him or by him.

“He also left because the church would not sing the psalms the “old way.”

“He refused to pay the church tax.

“David Lapham, being of full age, testifyeth and saith, March ye 6th, 1745. Mr. Ebenezer Damon commanded me to go to Samuel Tilden with him, and we found him in his pasture at work, and when he saw us he run and said, ‘run, Devils, run,’ and we followed him to his house and he shut ye door, and we were a going to drive away his cattle, and he came out and said, ‘where a devil are you going to drive my cattle,’ and Mr. Damon said, ‘if you will pay your rates we won’t,’ and he said, ‘you bring in Damn new ways, and make me pay; Pox on you Irelanders, go join to ye pretender, and I command ye peace,’ and we took his cattle to drive them away.”

The church restored to communion Sam’l Tilden, and Nathaniel Eames withdrew from church as one of the reasons because "ye church had restored to their communion brother Samuel Tilden, who he looked upon as a disorderly walker and an ignorant man, who had not knowledge enough to come to communion."

Rev. Atherton Wales preached in this church 56 years, and during the revolutionary period.

EPITAPHS AND ANCIENT GRAVESTONES IN MARSHFIELD HILLS CEMETERY.

Epitaphs I deciphered from old gravestones, from a century to nearly two centuries old, in the cemetery at the rear of the Unitarian church, Marshfield Hills, on the part known as "God's Acre."

"Here rests the body of Mrs. Elizabeth Bryant (born in 1714) died in 1788, aged 74."

"The sweet remembrance of the just Shall flourish while they sleep in dust."

"Here rests the body of Joseph Bryant, Esq., who died May 6, 1796, in the 53rd year of his age."

"Why should we start and fear to die,
What timerous worms we mortals are,
Death is the gate of endless joy,
And yet we dread to enter there."

“Here rests the body of Mrs. Sarah Bryant, wife of Joseph Bryant, and dau. of Thos. Little, born June ye 8th, 1755, and died Nov. ye 9th, 1792.”

“Nothing can be truly great which is uncertain.
Nothing truly good which must shortly have an end.”

“In memory of Edward Oakman, who died May 28, 1791, in ye 75th year of his age (born in 1716.)”

“Old age with all her dismal train,
Invades our golden years.
While sighs and groans and raging pains,
And death which never spares.”

“In memory of Mrs. Sarah Oakman, who died Jan. 22, 1794. In ye 78th year of her age. (Born in 1716.)”

“Stoop down my tho'ts that us'd to rise.
Converse a while with death.
Think how a gasping mortal lies.
And pants away his breath.”

“In memory of Capt. Nathaniel Clift, who died Sept. 5, 1833. Aged 69 years. (Born in 1764.)”

“Ay! but within—within there sleeps.
One o'er whose mouldering clay.
The loathesome earth-worm winds and creeps,
And washes that form away.”

“Receive O' Earth her faded form,
In thy cold bosom let it lie
Safe let it rest from ev'ry storm,
Soon must it rise no more to die.”

“Miss Mary Phillips died in 1832, aged 75. (Born in 1757.)”

“This languishing head is at rest.
Its thinking and aching is o’er,
This quiet immovable breast
Is rung by affliction no more.”

“In memory of Israel Clift, died Feb. 7, 1843. Aged 84. (Born, 1759.)”

“All ye who gaze upon this stone,
Remember soon your turn must come,
Though deaf and dum, God’s will is done
Death cuts down all beneath the sun.”

“In memory of Elizabeth Tilden, died Oct. 19, 1784. Aged 85 years. (Born, 1699.)”

“The graves of all his saints be blest.
There should the dying members rest.”

In memory of Stephen Tilden. Died in 1779.

“Reader stand still and spend a tear.
Think on the dust that slumbers here,
When you read the state of me,
Think on the glass that runs for thee.”

Elizabeth, dau. of Rev. Atherton Wales, who preached at the Hills Unitarian church over half a century before, and during the Revolution. (Died in 1742.)

In memory of Mrs. Mary Phillips, wife of Dea. Elisha Phillips, died May 13, 1807, aged 86. (Born, 1721.)

“See here! behold I moulder in the dist,
As I lie now, so certainly you must.

When this you see remember me,
Think of death and eternity."

In memory of Dea. Elisha Phillips, died Apr. 3, 1770.

WALKER.

The Marshfield Walkers are descended from John Walker. He first appears in 1643. His name being in the list of those able to bear arms at that time. His death in the prime of his manhood gave little opportunity for making his name conspicuous. His descendants have not been numerous, and have largely belonged to the mechanical and agricultural classes.

*John*¹, the ancestor, mar. Lydia Reed of Marshfield, and among other children was a son, *John*² who died in his ninetieth year.

*John*² b. Oct. 26, 1657, d. 1747, son of *John*¹ the ancestor. Had a son, Isaac, who belonged to the Society of Friends. He mar. Bethiah Norcut, and had five children.

*Isaac*³ (*John*² *John*¹) had a son *Isaiah*⁴, who was also a Quaker. Mar. Bathsheba Sherman and settled on a portion of the ancient homestead. The house is still standing near Ventress Hall, and rear of the "Marshfield (grocery) store." It has been in the Walker name until quite recently. The last occupant of this name being Asa Walker, who d. in 1900.

*Isaiah*⁴ (*Isaac*³ *John*² *John*¹) b. Aug. 12, 1724. Of his nine children two sons and two daughters remained in Marshfield, marrying and making homes in this town.

*Bethia*⁵ (*Isaiah*⁴ *Isaac*³ *John*² *John*¹) b. Nov. 15, 1757. Mar. Peleg Thomas, and has descendants here bearing various names.

*Asa*⁵ (*Isaiah*⁴ *Isaac*³ *John*² *John*¹) b. May 21, 1763, d. Apr. 8, 1826. Mar. 1st wi. Abigail, dau. of Chas. Baker, d. Apr. 8, 1812. Mar. 2nd wife, Lydia, dau. of Zenas Thomas, d. Mch. 19, 1858. Had: 8 children, two of whom, Charles and Asa, settled in Marshfield.

Levi,⁵ (Isaiah,⁴ Isaac,³ John,² John,¹) b. July 9, 1766, d. Dec. 1854. He was also twice mar. first to Ruth (Winslow) Cushman. She d. age 21, leaving one child, bearing the mother's name. 2nd wi. was Zermiah, dau. of Ephraim Holmes of Kingston, b. Jan. 20, 1771, d. Apr. 12, 1857. She was the mother of 3 daughters and three sons.

Sarah, (Isaiah,⁴ Isaac,³ John,² John,¹) b. May 22, 1769, d. Mch. 16, 1854. Mar. Thomas Bourne, and was left a widow at the age of 38, with four children. She was a woman of strong character, and a woman of much usefulness. She was distinguished as a nurse, and continued in that calling until nearly 80 years of age. She retained till her decease measurably, the costume worn by her in the prime of her life, never dropping the full boned stays, or the bright scarlet cloak, fashionable at that period of her earthly existence. Her funeral services were conducted by Rev. E. Alden, whose text was, Gen. 35th chapter, 8th verse, viz: "Deborah, Rebekah's nurse, died and was buried beneath Bethel, under the oak.

In the next generation was Charles,⁶ (Asa,⁵ Isaiah,⁴ Isaac,³ John,² John,¹) b. Aug. 30, 1800, son of Asa.⁵ Mar. Ann, dau. of Col. Jesse Reed. He was the father of Charles Walker,⁷ of Greenbush, Mass., also of Mrs. James L. Damon, and Mrs. James E. Baker of Marshfield.

Asa,⁶ (Asa,⁵ Isaiah,⁴ Isaac,³ John,² John,¹) Brother of above Charles,⁶ b. July 6, 1817. Mar. Huldah, the dau. of Israel Carver, and lived on the ancient homestead as before mentioned in rear of "Marshfield," formerly Luther P. Hatch's store. He was the last occupant there of that family name. Of Levi's children, two sons settled in town, Levi,⁶ and Ephraim H.⁶

*Levi,*⁶ (Levi,⁵ Isaiah,⁴ Isaac,³ John,² John,¹) b. Feb. 22, 1802. Mar. Ruth Stetson of Pembroke, Mch. 27, 1827. He was an efficient and interested member of the Farmer's Club, which afterwards developed into the Marshfield Agricultural and Horticultural Society, of which he was the first vice president.

CHILDREN.

III. Mary Jane,⁷ b. Apr. 23, 1837, d. 1876. Mar. Nahum Stetson of Hanson, Jan. 9, 1857.

*Ephraim H.,*⁶ (Levi,⁵ Isaiah,⁴ Isaac,³ John,² John,¹) b. June 11, 1805. In early manhood, before the days of steam cars or even stage coaches, he walked from his home in Marshfield (some distance beyond the Congregational church) to Boston, spent several hours in the city, attending to business, and then walked back to his home before he slept. Isaiah, who was a twin brother, with Ephraim H., lived in Pembroke. These three brothers lived to celebrate their golden weddings. The only family bearing the Walker name in Marshfield, among the descendants, is that of Ephraim H.,⁷ son of above Ephraim H.,⁶ who occupies the homestead of his father and grandfather.

Another branch of the Ameses.

(Facts given by Dr. Azel Ames.)

Capt. Azel Ames came to Marshfield with his brother, Elijah, in 1810. They were of the old Bridgewater and Braintree stock, which came over in 1635. They came to Marshfield to build a factory for the Marshfield Cotton and Woolen Co., the 11th cotton mill in the United States), which was where Bart Chandler's mill now stands, and on the same dam.

Capt. Azel and his brother ran the mill, the captain chiefly and ultimately (practically) owned and run it, and made money. "The factory" was in its day the life and center of things in town. Around it pretty much all the activities revolved. Factory, store, blacksmith shop, grist mill, etc., and here was the religious, political and military headquarters of the south part of the town, from 1810 till 1845, or 1850, when it declined. Capt. Azel died in 1842, but his brother, Elijah, continued till 1866. The one was a born manager, leader and organizer, executive and broad for his day. The other, a superb mechanic, fertile in reasoning, invention and expert. Capt. Azel had three sons: Dea. Azel and Job, and Rev. M. Ames, and four daughters, 2 of whom, lived to maturity, and one of whom is still living, unmar. at Lakewood, N. J. The Captain's widow, Mercy (Hatch), d. in 1842.

Mr. Elijah Ames, who was twice married, had children by each marriage. By the first wife, Abigail Ford, (of the old Ford stock) he had three sons and two daughters. The sons were, Dea. Elijah Ames, of the "Neck," Mr. Elisha T. Ames, a wealthy Boston merchant, and Capt. Nathaniel Ames, a mariner. The daughters both married Marshfield men and had families.

By Mr. Ames 2nd wife, he had two sons, and a daughter. The sons have been mechanics in Marshfield at times. His 2nd wife was Miss Mercy Hewitt of Marshfield. The descendants in the next (present) generation, the 3 sons of Capt. Azel, and the 3 sons of Mr. Elijah, by the 1st wife have all been non-residents of Marshfield, except Dr. Azel Ames, son of Dea. Azel Ames, who for 20 years occupied the pleasant summer place built by him at "Rexham," adjoining the farm of his father-in-law (at the "Neck") Dea. Elijah Ames. His sons have attained prominence in railroad and diplomatic service, and the only living son of Rev. Mr. Ames has acquired distinction as a Professor of American History.

Mr. Elisha Ames left one son, Mr. Joseph B. Ames, a Boston gentleman of leisure, and two daughters, unmar.

Capt. Nath'l T. Ames left one son, Nath'l T. Ames, Jr., of Virginia, and two daughters, both married.

Dea. Elijah Ames of the "Neck," son of Elijah and grandson of Job. Mar. Sarah A. Thomas, Nov. 26, 1840. Had: 1, Sarah A. Deering,¹⁰ Mar. Dr. Azel Ames. 2, Mary Abby.¹⁰ Mar. Edward E. Ames. 3, George,¹⁰ d. young. 4, Waterman T.,¹⁰ d. young. 5, Elijah.¹⁰ Mar. Rosa, dau. of Capt. Albert T. Sprague, resides at Grant, Montana. (He is a wealthy cattle dealer there.) 6, Elizabeth.¹⁰ Mar. Capt. Everett Elbridge. 7, William.¹⁰ Mar. 1st, Edith Porter. 8, Lucy T.,¹⁰ unmar. 9, Ray,¹⁰ unmar. Mrs. Ames, the mother, d. Feb., 1899. Dea. Ames, the father, d. Nov. 26, 1899, age 83. Lucy T. and Ray are present occupants of the old homestead of their father, Dea. Elijah Ames. The present occupants of the Old Ames' place on the South River road, which has been in the family for many years, are Edward E. Ames and wife, Mary A. Ames, and his sister, Grace W. Ames. Edward's father was Sumner Ames, born in Marshfield in 1812, d. in 1892. His father, (Edward E., grandfather) was Abner Eames, b. 1780, d. 1830. His father was Benj. Eames, (Edward E., great grandfather.)

I. Nathaniel,⁵ b. June, 1839.

II. Sarah R.,⁵ b. Feb. 15, 1844. Mar. Nathan Dorr, now deceased. He was a soldier in the civil war. Had: 1, Lucy P.,⁶ b. Oct. 7, 1865. 2, Clara L., b. Dec. 20, 1867. 3, Arthur E.,⁶ b. Oct. 6, 1870. 4, Emma E., b. Mch. 11, 1875. 5, Edith L., b. Sept. 10, 1879. 6, Porter W., b. July 23, 1882. Edith married Albert Richards, Jan. 1, 1902. Had: Albert Wright, b. Feb. 22, 1903. Arthur married Alice Willard, Apr. 27, 1904.

Chas. Porter Wright, above mentioned, was Daniel Webster's foreman on his extensive farm in Marshfield, some ten years up to the death of the great statesman, and although Mr. Wright is 90 years of age, he has been able at his advanced age to dictate to his granddaughter some remembrances of Mr. Webster for this history of Marshfield, which has been also narrated to Judge Aldrich and the late Senator Hoar at their solicitation. He says: "The discussion as to Mr. Webster's height has arisen within five or ten years. Of course I do not undertake to be exact as to his height, my own was a little under six feet, and Mr. Webster was not as tall as I. I should say his height was about five feet ten. It might have been a little more or a little less, but not far from that either way. I can only guess as to his weight, and guessing I should say that while I knew him, it varied from 180 to 200 pounds.

I have been asked about driving the oxen to his window during his sickness. I remember that very well. He requested that the oxen be brought up. This was a short time before his death, a week or two. I yoked five or six pair and drove them on a string, as it is called, in front of the side parlor window, under the old elm. He stood in the window with a shawl over his shoulders as I remember it. He stood and looked at them some minutes, and then waved them away with his hand. He was very fond of his oxen. That was his hobby. He thought a great deal of stock, anyway, and seemed to take great pride in oxen.

If he was out on the road and saw a pair that was a little out of the ordinary, he would stop and look at them, and after returning home would inquire about them. He had one pair of white-faced oxen that he called his wife's oxen. His wife was with him when he first saw them.

It was usual with him upon his return from an absence, as for instance when he had been in Washington, upon arriving, to drive to the side door, and after entering the house and leaving his things, not to sit down, but to pass through the kitchen part of the house and out the back door to the barn to look over the stock.

I hardly ever knew him to sit down in the house until he had looked over his stock, at seasons when they were in the barn.

In the fall when we were harvesting corn, he would often come in and get ears for the oxen. They stood in a line and would be facing him as he came in. He would generally pick out for the oxen the stalks with the largest ears. It pleased him to see them reach for the corn, and as he passed along the line he would tease them by holding the ears out, and as they reached for them, playfully draw them away. He usually went down the full line of oxen, giving an ear to each one.

Webster was habitually an early riser. I remember one time not long before his death, he said to me, (it was in the gray of the morning). "Well, Porter Wright, you and I have succeeded in getting up at a seasonable hour in the morning through life, if we have not succeeded in anything else."

I was not a politician or a sportsman. I think he looked upon me as a farmer. He talked with me freely and familiarly about the stock, and matters concerning the farm, but he never alluded to politics in talking with me, and he hardly ever talked to me of his shooting or fishing. I have seen him, though, working hours in silence over his guns and tackle in the room where he kept his guns and fishing gear.

In the latter part of his life he gave much more attention to fishing than to shooting.

I never heard him utter a profane word. He could sufficiently rebuke with his eyes those about the farm who annoyed him. He had sinking spells as he was drawing near the end, and as he revived he said more than once in my hearing, "I still live." I remember distinctly hearing him say it to Dr. Jeffreys. There was a pond on the farm, about 300 yards from the house, which originally was of small extent. He had it enlarged, so as to embrace probably two acres.

On the pond was a small boat, and in the autumn of 1852, during his last illness, he told the men to hang a lantern at the mast-head of the boat, where he could see it from his chamber window, burning brightly through the night. He never told me why he had it done, and the reason I do not know unless it was when he awoke in the night, he could watch its movements upon the water. I remember that Mr. Webster was once asked why he did not buy the small farms surrounding his own, and he replied, "I want to keep my neighbors, not drive them away."

He was a very congenial man, and sometimes in the evening when those employed about the farm, were gathered in the back kitchen, he would come in and join in the conversation and story telling. This he did frequently in the fall before his death. He was the first of those about Marshfield to use kelp for a land fertilizer. He knew every one of his eighty head of stock, and would send on from Washington directions as to their care. In buying land his aim was to get poor or medium land, and work it into good land.

One time the men were telling what they did when they were boys, and Mr. Webster related the following anecdote of himself in connection with his boyhood days in New Hampshire. He said a heavily loaded team stuck just below the crest of a steep hill. The two horses were light in weight, and could not move the load sufficiently to carry it over. Mr. Webster said as he came along and watched the man pull the horses two or three times, it occurred to him that if the horses were weighted down they could pull more, so he jumped on the back of one of them, for more weight, and they pulled the load up the hill. Mr. Webster was very fond of coarse rye and Indian bread.

The tougher the crust, the better he liked it. He had it toasted dry and hard by putting it on a shingle in the oven. Mr. Webster's farm was some distance from the sea, and in coming from his boat after a fishing excursion, he would pass by three or four of his neighbor's houses. If he had met with success, he never failed to leave a fish or two with each neighbor."

Robert Carver, the Pilgrim ancestor, had in 1638 a grant of 20 acres at Green Harbor river, Marshfield, and a garden place at Stony Brook in Duxbury. According to Marshfield records it was granted Feb. 12, 1643, "that Robert Carver should have that tract of meadow that doth lie between Mr. Edward Winslow's fence and Mr. William Thomas' fence from fence and creek to creek." He is called a sawyer on the records. He was admitted a freeman in 1644. A portion of the original grant at Green Harbor is owned and occupied by the sons of David Carver. John Carver, son of Robert, had lands in Duxbury in 1640. Aug. 5, 1706, about 100 acres of land was granted to William Carver and Joseph Waterman. It was bounded on the east by "puddle wharf brook" and a cart way called "Rogers, his way." Probably this was the estate formerly owned by Silas Carver, which only recently passed from Carver ownership, as it is known to have been occupied by Israel Carver⁵ previous to his removal to Fox Islands, Me., in 1766, then owned by his son Alanson, by the latter's son Israel, and last by son Silas Carver, and now by Fremont Whidden. A John Carver was selectman in 1757.

GARDNER.

Stephen Gardner, the sixth by that name in a direct line from John Gardner, who came from England to Plymouth in 1635 and settled in Hingham in 1640, was born in Hingham June 2nd, 1812.

At the age of twenty-one he married Maria Ford of So. Scituate, now Norwell. At that time he was a shoemaker, but he also worked in the shipyard in Medford with his friend, Wm. P. Tilden, who later became a noted Unitarian minister. In 1840 Mr. Gardner and family moved to East Marshfield, now Marshfield Hills. In 1849 he bought the house in Littleton, now Sea View, where he lived fifty years. He became a shoe manufacturer, giving employment to many men and women of the town.

The first sewing machine used in the town was used in his shoe factory. Later in life Mr. Gardner gave up the shoe business and carried on quite an extensive wood and lumber business.

Mr. Gardner took a very active interest in politics, and was a Republican from the organization of the party. In 1855 he was elected to represent the town in the Legislature. At the age of 84 his political zeal was unabated, and he went to Boston as a delegate to a Republican convention. In December, 1896, he fell on the ice and broke his hip. He lived till 1899, for most of the time confined to the house and cared for by his two daughters. His wife died 1895.

CHILDREN.

The one son, the seventh:

I. Stephen Gardner, and the last, was born at Ea. Marshfield. In 1862 he joined the 43d Regiment, M. V., and d. in Newbern, N. C., of typhoid fever the next year. The "Nelson Gardner Sons of Veterans" was named for (Stephen) Nelson Gardner, who died in the war as above.

II. Sophia, was b. in So. Scituate, and mar. Amos Billings of Maine. He served in the 24th Maine Regiment; d. and was buried on an island in the Mississippi river in 1863. After the death of her husband Mrs. Billings taught school in So. Scituate and Hanover. After several years she married John Hayward of So. Braintree. Neither of them is now living.

III. Sarah M., b. in So. Scituate. Mar. Joseph Sherman of Boston. They have both passed on. Had 2 children, a son and daughter, both living in Marshfield. 1, Cora, mar. Alonzo Stephens, station master at Sea View, June, 1881. They had 2 sons, 1, Percy T., b. Feb., 1882; 2, Alton P., b. Nov. 1891.

X. Mary Adella, b. in Littletown, was a public school teacher in South Scituate, Hanover, Dover, N. H. She mar. Daniel G. Thompson of New Hampshire. They reside in Hyde Park, where Mr. Thompson is a teacher and a prominent citizen.

XI. Susan C., b. in Littletown. Mar. Alfred Keene of the same place. They now own and occupy the old homestead, bought and occupied by Mr. Gardner in 1849. Had two children: 1, Ethel, and 2, Horace.

The following quotations are from the county and local papers: "Mr. Gardner was one of the most prominent men in the town of Marshfield. He was a born leader of men. He was a good, persuasive and impressive speaker. He was the advocate of the highest principles, governing the actions of man. He was a grand specimen of a man, physically, morally and mentally. He was a good man, and few men will be more missed than our esteemed townsman, Stephen Gardner. His family now living consists of seven daughters, three sons-in-law, twenty-nine grandchildren, and ten great grandchildren. The funeral took place from the Unitarian church, the date being the eighty-seventh anniversary of his birth."

The following letter is from one who knew him well.

Navy Department.

Washington, June 6, 1899.

"Dear Mrs. Crane:

I thank you for writing me in regard to your father. I am sorry to learn of his death, and yet it is only the rounding out of a long, noble and useful life. I valued his friendship and admired the sturdy high character which made him a marked man. He always seemed to me a representative of the best New England Pilgrim stock. Please accept for yourself and the other members of the family my sincere regards."

Very truly yours,

(signed) John D. Long.

CHURCH.

Joseph Church, the colonial ancestor of the Churches in this region came from England to Duxbury early in Colonial days. He had two sons, Capt. Benjamin and Nathaniel. Capt. Benjamin was one of the leading Captains of "King Phillips War." United States History says of him. "In June 1676, a strong force, raised with the view of exterminating the savage foe, was placed under command of celebrated Captain Church.

In the course of the summer he killed and captured many of the dispersed Wampanoags. Among others, the wife and child of King Philip were taken! 'My heart breaks' cried the chieftain. 'Now I am ready to die!' The child alluded to was a boy of nine years, the last of the family of Massasoit. The condition of Philip was now indeed hopeless. Deserted, betrayed, hunted down, he could hope for relief only in death. With his few remaining followers, he took refuge in a swamp, in the broad hunting grounds which had belonged to his fathers. Here while trying to obtain rest, he was disturbed by gloomy dreams. Impressed with a foreboding evil, he bade his men to save themselves and leave him to his fate. It was time. Capt. Church was upon him. An Englishman aimed at the chief, but his musket missed fire, and a friendly Indian in the company seized the moment to shoot Philip through the heart. Church's army raised three cheers and treated the fallen King with savage indignity."

Joseph, the ancestor, removed with his two sons, Benjamin and Nathaniel to Scituate.

TOLMAN.

Mr. Tolman (grandfather of Henry Tolman of Green Harbor, Mass.), came to this country from England, sometime in the latter part of the 18th century. He settled in Marshfield. He built the house now owned and occupied by Marshall Lewis. There the father of Henry was born, date unknown. He mar. Hannah Sprague, and built the house lately owned by Albert Williams. This house is located near the Methodist parsonage. Henry Tolman,⁹ the son, was born in this house on the 17th of April, 1818.

Mar. in 1841 at Buffalo, N. Y. William H. Tolman, their eldest son, was born there. He now resides at Green Harbor. He has no male descendants. (See Henry Tolman's Soldier's record in Chapter to Soldiers.)

HON. NATHANIEL H. WHITING.

Although Mr. Whiting and his ancestors were not born in Marshfield, yet he lived here so many years and was so long identified with Marshfield in her enterprises and growth for the past half a century, it is fitting that he should have a place in the history of Marshfield. He was born in Plymouth, Mass. Mar. Miss Clark of Marshfield, dau. of Benjamin Clark. In his early years he was contemporary with Garrison and other reformers in the abolition of slavery. He was elected Senator, and served with great ability in the Massachusetts Senate. He ably advocated at that time the establishment of the State Metropolitan Police. It was a hard struggle to obtain it, but it was carried. The eloquence and marked ability displayed at this time gave Mr. Whiting an extended reputation as an orator and the abilities of a statesman. He was soon after appointed an officer of customs in the Boston Custom House, where he remained several years. When the Cohasset and Duxbury Railroad was built, he was appointed one of the directors to represent Marshfield, and continued in that office until the road was absorbed by the Old Colony Railroad. He was much interested in the Marshfield Agricultural and Horticultural Society, and at his decease bequeathed to the society about $1800, which was used to pay off the debt.

Mr. Whiting was largely interested in the politics of the town, being the most influential leader here in the Republican ranks. He also wielded a marked influence in the general affairs of the town. He was honest, courageous and uncompromising in his dealings with men.

BOURNE.

Tradition points to the Bourne family as originating in Wales, but history records the Marshfield branch as coming from Kent Co., England.

Thomas Bourne and his wife, Elizabeth, with several children, came to Plymouth sometime near 1630. He was a resident of Plymouth long enough to be well known there, and was so desirable a citizen that in 1637 the Court of Plymouth Colony granted him and others called "special persons," "that would promise to live at Plymouth on some good farms, and so tie the lands of Plymouth as farms for the same; and these they might keep their cattle, tilling by some servants," and retain their dwellings in Plymouth.

Dec. 4, 1637, a grant of 100 acres was given to Thomas Bourne, and it was the second grant recorded of land in Marshfield. The same day 100 acres was granted to Josiah Winslow. The town was incorporated in 1640, and the same year Thomas Bourne was one of two that were chosen deputies to represent the town in the October General Court, and he was elected three times afterward.

Under date of Aug., 1645, the following entry is found: "On a motion being made for one to teach school, we whose names are undersigned, are willing to pay yearly besides paying for our children; we shall send the following sums." Among others we find the name of Thomas Bourne, who subscribed ten shillings. Thus early, Thomas Bourne, his son, John, and others, took measures to establish a public school. We have one more record of this Thomas, called by one writer the "eldest of the Marshfield settlers and a patriarch of its Eden."

It is written Thomas Bourne died and was buried ye 11th May, 1664, age 83. Thomas Bourne had several daughters and only one son, John, who was born in England. He married Alice Besbeach, now called Bisbee, and this is the second marriage entered on the Marshfield records, July 18, 1645. His eldest son was named Thomas. Then we have five successive generations of John Bournes, one of whom is now living. The third or middle John Bourne was a Revolutionary soldier and centenarian. He was born Apr. 10, 1759, and died in 1859. Less than one mile from his home was the homestead of Nathaniel Ray Thomas and later of Hon. Daniel Webster.

Mr. Thomas' sympathies were with the British in the early days of the Revolution. He evidently was afraid of the patriotic spirit of his neighbors and townsmen, for he sent to the English authorities for a company of soldiers, who came to guard him. Every night, when calm enough, the sound of the sentry's voice would be wafted across the marsh to the ears of the Bournes. "Twelve o'clock and all is well." That cry helped to stir up the patriotic spirit of the surrounding community, and the boy of 16 drank in so much of the feeling that he shouldered his flint-lock gun and was soon in the trenches, helping to fortify Dorchester Heights. From that on he followed the fortunes of his country in battles and in camp (being near death's door with small-pox), till the last gun was fired. At the close of the war he was in the state of New York, from which state he walked to his home in old Marshfield, there to spend the remainder of his long life of one hundred years. The following gives the direct lines of descent of the Bournes to the present time:

Thomas Bourne,¹ and wife, Elizabeth, came from Kent County, England, about the year 1630.

John,² b. in England. Mar. Alice Besbeeck, or Bisbee, July, 1645.

Thomas,³ their son, b. in 1647. Mar. Elizabeth Rouse.

John,⁴ their son, b. in 1685. Mar. Abigail Collamore.

John,⁵ their son, b. in 1737. Mar. Lucy Dingley.

John,⁶ their son, b. in 1759, d. 1859. Mar. Martha Sampson.

John,⁷ their son, b. in 1790. Mar. Ruth Ford.

John H.,⁸ their son, b. 1829. Mar. Sarah T. Walker. He has served on the Board of Selectmen and on the Board of School Committee; was also a member of the State Board of Agriculture for 3 years.

Proctor Bourne, b. in 1791. Mar. Temperance Thomas. He was Postmaster of Marshfield for many years, keeping a store in connection with the postoffice and serving the town as its treasurer and collector. His children are all dead, but two grandchildren are now living: Annie F. Calligan and Emma P. Kaler, with one great-grandchild, Grace B. Williams, all living at Evanston, Ill.

SPRAGUE.

William Sprague,¹ the ancestor, came to Salem in 1628 or 1629, and afterward settled in Charlestown. He removed to Hingham in 1636.

Samuel,² son of William, b. 1640. Mar. Sarah, dau.

of Thomas Chillingworth, and with his father-in-law removed to Marshfield prior to 1664, to the farm on the South River Road, occupied by the late Chillingworth Sprague. He left 8 children, four sons and four daughters. Samuel and John removed to Duxbury, and Nathan and James remained in Marshfield, and are the two sons of Samuel² and grandsons of the ancestor, William,¹ from whom the Marshfield Spragues descended.

Nathan,³ son of Samuel.² No date of birth.

No date of birth.

IV. Adeline J., b. Mch. 31, 1855. Mar. Wm. C. Lapham. Reside in Wollaston. Had 1 child.

Capt. Stephen Cushing Sprague, at the age of 15, having previously spent two summers on the Grand Banks with his father, started from his home in Duxbury with 50 cents in his pocket, walked to Boston and shipped in the Merchant service. The first vessel that he commanded was the "Brig Smyrna," a small vessel of about 200 tons, owned by Ezra Weston & Sons of Duxbury, and engaged in the Mediterranean trade. He was afterward master of the "Barques Matilda" and "Broosa," and the ships "Gulf Stream," "Merchant," "Oroondates" and "Helen Clinton," the last being a vessel of 1300 tons and considered a large vessel at that time. He retired in 1871. During his long life upon the ocean he was exceedingly fortunate in being shipwrecked but once, upon the coast of Denmark, when a young man before the mast, and losing but one vessel, the barque "Broosa," which foundered at sea.

At the commencement of the Civil War in 1861, he commanded the ship "Gulf Stream," and was engaged in carrying cotton between the ports of New Orleans and Mobile on this side of the water and Liverpool and Havre on the other. When he arrived off Mobile he paid the pilot his fee, got what information he could, and sailed for Boston, thereby saving his vessel.

James,⁴ Sprague's homestead was near the residence of the late Hon. Nathaniel H. Whiting, and was occupied by Mrs. Nellie Sprague. The house has, I think since then, been torn down. Capt. Albert Sprague, now living, descended, I think, from the above James⁴ Sprague. Capt. Seth Sprague, father of Capt. Albert, had 2 brothers, Harvey and Luther. Luther was the father of Edward Sprague, who is the brother of Will Sprague.

REV. EBENEZER ALDEN.

Sketch furnished by Mrs. Louisa Alden Sprague, daughter of Mr. Alden.

“Formerly, even more perhaps than nowadays, the country minister occupied an important place in every rural community, closely allied as he was with his life and interests, largely moulding and influencing public thought, opinion and action, the ideal ‘parish preacher,’ not only well known, but universally respected, consulted, revered, and loved of all; the counsellor, friend and helper. For nearly fifty years the subject of this brief sketch lived among the people of this town, realizing and exemplifying in his life and experience to an unusual degree, this ideal life of a country pastor. Shadowed, it is true, by much of trial, discouragement and privation, yet filled no less with joy and happiness. Born in Randolph, Aug. 10th, 1819, and coming from good old Pilgrim stock, even descending in a double line from the immortal John and Priscilla Alden, he was the eldest of six children, and was educated in Randolph Academy and Amherst College, graduating there with the class of 1839. Having chosen the ministry as his profession, he entered Andover Theological Seminary, completing the course in 1843. Then a young man of 24, he with eleven others formed the far-famed "Iowa Band," who went forth as home missionaries into Iowa, then a territory, and considered the far west, reaching only after three weeks of travel by steam cars, canal and steam boats around the lakes, and over the prairies in one of the prairie schooners. Mr. Alden settled in Tipton, the shire town of Cedar Co., where he labored five years, sowing good seed, which has blossomed and brought forth abundant fruitage. Returning for a second visit east, he met, and later, Apr. 4, 1848, married Miss Maria Louisa Dyer, of So. Abington, now Whitman, with whom, journeying by way of Niagara, he went back to Tipton. Owing, however, to the unfavorable influence of the climate upon her health, they were obliged the next year to return eastward permanently, and the ensuing two years he preached as temporary supply in several places. Having been invited to the pastorate at Marshfield, he was installed pastor of the 1st Cong. Church in Oct. 1850, and for 35 years continued as active pastor, when resigning his charge, he retained his connection as pastor emeritus for 14 years. (nearly completing a half century there,) until Jan. 4th, 1899, when he was suddenly called to his reward. Among his parishioners was the great statesman, Daniel Webster, and it was Mr. Alden's privilege to know him personally. Mr. Webster's pew in the church was the front side wall pew, to the left of the pulpit, and whenever in town he was in his accustomed place as worshipper. In later years Mr. Fletcher Webster gave this pew to Mr. Alden, and is still owned by one of the family. In accordance with Mr. Webster's express desire and request, Mr. Alden, as the local clergyman, conducted his simple funeral services in the presence of a vast concourse of people, including many of the most distinguished names in the country. While it was esteemed an honor and a privilege, it was nevertheless somewhat of a trying ordeal for a young minister to perform those duties, which, however, were acceptably and appropriately rendered.

It may be of interest to mention that Mr. Alden also officiated at four other funeral services in the family of Daniel Webster, attending those of four generations.

During Mr. Alden's pastorate he likewise attended the last services of three people more than one hundred years of age, namely: Messrs. Samuel Curtis, John Bourne and Asa Sherman, a case not often paralleled, we think, in pastoral experience; while among the hundreds of others whose burial services Mr. Alden conducted, not a few were over 90 years old. These instances of longevity is speaking well for the healthfulness of this old Pilgrim town.

While pastor Mr. Alden also solemnized more than 250 marriages, in several cases marrying the children of those formerly wedded by him. Mr. Alden was always an ardent and loyal patriot, deeply interested in the time of the civil war, and cheerfully paid $300 required to furnish a substitute on the field of battle: was ever in his place to vote, (with two unavoidable exceptions,) at every presidential election, ever interested in the public interests of the town, and an earnest and eager participant in the discussions at town meeting, whenever any question, to him of vital importance, came up affecting the moral or religious interests of the community. He actively promoted the cause of temperance and likewise of education, and was repeatedly elected as a member of the school committee, serving the town in this capacity, in all, for more than 16 years, resigning then because he felt his special work as pastor and preacher demanded all his time and energies. He was deeply engaged in the formation and success of the public library, and largely through his endeavor was the valuable gift from Mr. Bailey secured to the library, and from his own, not long before his death, he gave a number of volumes, especially of reference.

He was instrumental in preserving to the town, as a public common, the Old Training Field opposite his church, at one corner of which may still be seen the large stone once serving as a horse block, whereupon the colonial dames were accustomed to mount and dismount. He was active in all matters geneological and historical, compiled a history of the 1st church of our town, from its earliest days until the present, read and studied the old church and parish records, and was well informed concerning them. After carefully copying from the old books and from inscriptions in the ancient graveyard nearby, he arranged these, both in alphabetical and chronological order, and at his own expense caused to be made type-written copies, also collecting various facts of general interest concerning localities and people, and especially in later years was often visited and consulted in reference to these matters.

The parsonage, built just before his call to Marshfield, he entered with his family as its first occupants. There the children were born, and from thence two little ones were transplanted to the paradise of God, while four survive, to honor, cherish and love their parents' memory. In 1883 Mr. Alden bought the house so long his home, and with the proceeds, the parish purchased another, the present parsonage. He was permitted to welcome to christian fellowship many gathered into the fold through his instrumentality. His mortal remains rest in the cemetery close by the church where he so well had ministered, there awaiting the resurrection in which he so confidently believed. Of him may truthfully be said: 'He walked with God and he was not, for God took him.' "

CLIFT.

The American branch of the Clift family had its origin at Marshfield.

In the colonial records the first appearance of the name is under date of Nov. 25th, 1691, the marriage of

*William*¹ Clift of Marshfield to Lydia Wills of Scituate.

From that union it is believed all the Clifts in the United States have come into being. They are found not in great numbers, but widely scattered in different sections of our country, and a few specimens of the stock today are found in its native heath in the old town that first knew the name.

Tradition has it that the above-mentioned William made his advent in Yankee land under romantic circumstances. It is related that when seven years of age, he was brought from England by a Scituate ship master, who was hired to do so by the boy's relatives. Why the little fellow's kindred wished to be rid of him does not appear, but there is an inference that he was an inconvenient heir to coveted estates. The ship captain made a death bed confession that he received a sum of money, to be expended for the boy's benefit, which trust he betrayed by appropriating the money to his own use. The boy seems to have done very well, however, and the Rev. Samuel Wills of Scituate gave him his daughter Lydia to wife, as appears by the marriage record referred to above.

The waif from over seas and the parson's daughter of sixteen years, made them a home at Marshfield, begat sons and daughters in large numbers, as was the fashion of that day, struggled with their lot as best they might, we may well believe, and went the way of all the earth. The wife, Lydia Wills Clift, mother of all the American Clifts, died July 1, 1761, age 85, and her remains lie buried in the old church yard at Marshfield Hills, a few yards back of the present Unitarian church. When William Clift the first died, and where he was buried, is unknown, but William and Wills have been transmitted as family names through many generations of the tribe. The grandson of the first American Clift, born June 22, 1736, the youngest of 8 brothers and sisters, was named

Joseph.³ (William,² William,¹) He was a notable patriot of the revolutionary era, and during the war for independence was chosen to command two companies of Plymouth county soldiers. One of these companies was composed wholly of Marshfield men. Its duty was defensive, to guard the coast against incursions of British who would land parties from the ships and scour the country for provisions. The other company included men of Marshfield Hanover and Pembroke, and was part of the 10th Mass. Regiment, Col. Cushing. The company was led by Capt. Joseph Clift to Rhode Island in 1778, to help Gen. Sullivan drive the British away from that little colony. As often happens, so it was in this case, the enemy refused to be driven to any great extent, and the Marshfield warriors, together with several thousand other good men and true, returned to their homes bearing with them more experience than glory. The soldier of that day did not draw largely from the public treasury. Capt. Clift's men were entitled to receive from the state one shilling sixpence per day while on the march, and one shilling per day while in camp.

The Marshfield town records show that Capt. Clift was authorized later to proceed to Boston and collect this money for his men. The pay rolls for the same are now on file at the State House. The coast guard company of Marshfield men was officered by Joseph Clift, captain, and his two brothers, Nathaniel and Wills Clift, lieutenants.

Joseph,⁴ son of Capt. Joseph. (Joseph,³ William,² William,¹) b. July 19, 1767; d. Apr. 6, 1849. This second Joseph Clift served as Selectman of Marshfield more than 20 years; also a member of the School Committee and a Representative in the Legislature, then very frequently spoken of as the "Great and General Court." He was a Justice of the Peace, a land surveyor and a general man of business in the community. In his latter days he lived in the family of his son, Wales R. Clift.

The father and son espoused opposing sides in the great controversy that disrupted the Congregational denomination throughout Massachusetts in the early part of the last century. Joseph Clift, the father, remained with the old church at North Marshfield on the Unitarian side of the line, while Wales R. Clift, the son, adopted the religious opinions of the Calvinistic school and became a member of the new church, known as the Second Trinitarian Congregational Church of Marshfield. On the night of the meeting at which the division of the church culminated, Joseph and his son fought out their theological quarrel in wordy warfare. At the conclusion of the duel, they agreed to disagree.

As they owned their property in common, they stipulated with each other that each should contribute an equal amount to the support of the church of his choice, and each should go his own religious way unhindered by the other.

To the day of the father's death (some 12 years) this treaty of peace was maintained in the family, with the most unruffled content and without one word of dispute as to opinion or conduct. If all the men of Marshfield had been able to act in this spirit, much bitterness and strife would have been avoided.

*Wales R. Clift,*⁵ (Joseph,⁴ Joseph,³ William,² William,¹) followed in the footsteps of his father as a servant of the public in the positions of Town School Committee and Selectman. He and his father, Joseph⁴ and his grandfather, Capt. Joseph,³ lie in the little "Two-Mile" neighborhood burial place, the land for which was originally a part of the Clift farm. Children who survived him: I. Edwin,⁶ Susan⁶ Wildes. (Both remain residents on the old homestead at No. Marshfield.) III. Joseph L.⁶ IV. Walter L.⁶

The two latter sons of Wales R. were born and reared in Marshfield, but are residents elsewhere, and have been known for their connection with the United States Government. Joseph W. Clift served as surgeon with the Federal army for 3 years of the Civil War. At its close he found himself at Savannah, Ga., and in 1868 was elected from that district as a member of the 40th Congress, in which he sat with Blaine, Garfield, Thad. Stevens and Ben Butler.

Walter L. Clift was elected to represent the Savannah district in the Georgia Constitutional convention of 1867-8. Was appointed by Gen. Grant as Postmaster at Savannah, and has since served more than 30 years as an officer of the Treasury Department at Washington. During the present year he has been honored by an assignment as the representative of the Treasury in organizing a new branch of the customs auditing work at Chicago.

The Marshfield Clifts have been sturdy servants of the church as well as of the state.

The first church at the north part of the town, now Unitarian, was founded by a company of men and women, one of whom was William Clift, son of William,¹ the American ancestor, and father of the Revolutionary Captain, Joseph. This William was one of the first two deacons of the church: Capt. Joseph,⁴ son of Joseph,³ was likewise a deacon of the same church during most of his life.

REV. GEORGE LEONARD.

Sketch furnished by his daughter, Miss Sarah E. Leonard.

Rev. Geo. Leonard was born in Marshfield, Mass., May 26, 1801, and died in Marshfield, July 9, 1881, age 80 years. He was the son of Rev. Elijah Leonard, who was born in Raynham, Mass., in 1760; graduated at Yale College in 1783, and was pastor of the Second Congregational Society in Marshfield for 45 years.

Mr. Geo. Leonard's maternal grandfather was Percy Fobes, LL.D., one of the early professors of Yale. Mr. Leonard was descended from

*James Leonard*¹, who came from Great Britain to this country in 1652 and settled in Taunton, Mass. The family descended through two lines from Edward III. of England, through two of his sons, John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster and Thomas Plantagenet, Duke of Gloucester.

Major Thomas Leonard,² son of James,¹ was born Aug. 3, 1640, and was a distinguished citizen of Taunton. He was ensign in 1665 and subsequently captain and major of the First Regiment of Bristol County, and was connected with the militia forty-eight years. He was Judge of the Court of Quarter Sessions, Deputy, Selectman, member of town council, clerk of the Proprietary Records and treasurer of the Iron Works. The original copy of his commission as captain, dated 1692, and signed by William Phipps, Governor of the colony, is in the possession of Miss Sarah E. Leonard; valuable manuscript, documents and pictures of ancient Leonard houses, together with ancient books dating as far back as 1650, are also in possession of Miss Leonard and of the Old Colony Historical Society.

The mother of the Rev. Geo. Leonard was Molly Wales Fobes, dau. of Rev. Percy Fobes, LL.D. Her quaint portrait may still be seen at the Leonard mansion in Marshfield Hills.

Mr. Geo. Leonard fitted for college with Rev. Samuel Dean of So. Scituate, author of the valuable book "Dean's History of Scituate." He entered Harvard in 1819 at the age of 18, graduated in 1823 and studied theology at the Cambridge Divinity School when that institution was dominated by the inspiring influence of such men as Dr. Channing, Henry Ware and Andrew Norton. Here he studied three years and graduated with honors in 1826.

Oct. 24, 1830, he was married to Charlotte Emeline Washburn of Raynham, youngest dau. of Deacon Oliver Washburn of Raynham, and cousin to Governor Israel Washburn of Maine, Israel and Cadwallander Washburn, members of Congress, and Elisher B. Washburn, Minister to France in Grant's first administration. Mr. and Mrs. Leonard had seven children:

I. Edward, died in infancy. II. George Edward, died in 1871 in Marshfield, where he had always lived, age 35. III. Henry, principal of Bristol Academy, Taunton; died at Santa Barbara, Cal., in 1875, age 35. IV. Otis Liscome, Baptist minister and Evangelist, died in Marienburg, Germany in 1903, age 60. V. Sarah Eleanor, is first assistant in the Harvard Grammar School, Charlestown, Mass. VI. Maria, wife of Judson Ewell, died in Marshfield in 1881, age 33.

Mr. Leonard was ordained as minister of the Second Congregational Society in Marshfield in 1836, as successor to his father, Rev. Elijah, who with him preached in this church nearly 70 years. After a ministry of 25 years he resigned the charge of his parish and withdrew from professional work, though at the urgent request of his parishioners he often preached in his old pulpit, and almost up to the time of his death performed pastoral work in the parish. His last public appearance was in June, 1881, in the pulpit of the Trinitarian Church, when he introduced a lady speaker who addressed the audience on temperance, a subject always dear to his heart. This incident shows his attitude and breadth of view in regard to the questions of the hour.

Mr. Leonard had clearly defined and firmly fixed religious convictions, which he was ready to express and defend on every proper occasion. He accepted them as the working forces of his ministry and his life, and they never failed him. In his joys and sorrows his faith stood by him and gave him trust, submission and resignation. He was a model of pure, honest and upright dealing, and strongly in sympathy with all reforms. He was one of the earliest advocates of temperance and anti-slavery, and by voice and example gave force to his opinions. His physical health was remarkable. Up to his last illness in July, 1881, he had never to his recollection been so sick as to call a physician. Once he said to Dr. Blanchard, a former physician of Marshfield, and a close friend and parishioner, "I think, doctor, I never sent for you to come and see me, not even when I had my sore throat." "No," replied the doctor, "you used to come and see me."

Mr. Leonard was a busy writer. He left a large number of manuscript sermons and some printed ones. In 1870 he published a pamphlet entitled, "Marshfield Sixty Years Ago," and he left a written manuscript, "History of the Town of Marshfield from Its Settlement in 1632 to the Year 1850," but it was never published. He left diaries and journals, beginning at the time of his fitting for college in 1816. These records of his life cover a period of nearly seventy years, and are extremely interesting. Later they may be incorporated into a larger biography. His chosen wife proved a faithful helpmeet through his long life, able, intelligent and efficient, "ready in every good word and work." She died in 1884, three years after the death of her husband.

Mr. Leonard held offices of trust and honor in the town, and served on the School Committee twenty years. After an illness of only two weeks he passed away in his Marshfield home, July 9, 1881, only one day after the death of his daughter Maria.

A fitting close to this little sketch may be the inscription on his tombstone, which reads as follows: A faithful and beloved minister. A preacher direct and sincere in speech. An affectionate husband; a kind father. An honored and trusted citizen. His memory will be a legacy of honor and inspiration to the community.

RICHARDS.

The author of this history, though not a native of Marshfield, has lived here over thirty years, and his paternal and maternal ancestors, Wm. Richards and Thos. Clapp, settled in colonial days in adjoining towns, So. Scituate and Scituate respectively.

Lysander S. Richards, the author, was born in Quincy, Mass., April 13, 1835. Between the ages of 16 and 18 he was Acting Postmaster of Quincy. In his twenties he was President of the Quincy Charitable Society, President of the Quincy Adams Literary Association and Superintendent of the Unitarian Sunday School at the "Old Adams' Temple," Quincy, Mass. He was a member of the firm of Rodgers, (Clift), Richards & Co., in the wholesale hide and leather business, Boston, and later a member of the firm of Chas. Marsh & Co., and was burnt out in the big Boston fire, Nov. 9, 1872.

He has crossed the Continent twice from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Retired from business in 1874 on account of ill-health, and after completing the above trip, settled in Marshfield the same year. He was instrumental in changing the name of East Marshfield to Marshfield Hills; was Justice of the Peace in Marshfield, 21 years, Registrar of Voters 12 years, delegate to Massachusetts State Board of Agriculture 3 years, Chairman Mar. Rep. Town Com. several years, and Moderator of caucuses, town meetings and conventions; was one of the leading actors in the temperance movement in Quincy and Marshfield; has been one of the board of government of the Marshfield Agricultural and Horticultural Society most of the time for 25 years; is President of the Clift Rodger's Free Library and President of the Marshfield Hills Village Improvement Society. He is the author of the following books: 1. "Vocophy, which Points to the Calling One Is Best Fitted to Follow. 2 "Breaking Up: or the Birth, Development and Death of Our Planet, in Story." 3. "The Universe: A Brief Description." 4. "New Propositions in Speculative and Practical Philosophy." 5. "The History of Marshfield in Two Volumes."

The father of Mr. Richards was the Hon. Lysander Richards of Quincy, Mass., born in Cummington, Mass., about 1808, died at Havana, Cuba, about 1851. He married Content C. Clapp. His father Nehemiah Richards, lived in Cummington in the days of the Revolution, and at a young age was a private in that struggle. Married Hanah Shaw.

Hon. Lysander Richards, father of L. S., was a member of the State Senate and First President of the Quincy Mutual Insurance Company.

The subject of this sketch mar. 1st wife, Miriam G. Rodgers, dau. of Wales Rogers of Marshfield, Dec. 25, 1858, and had: I. Clift R. Richards, b. Aug. 20, 1861, d. Nov. 19, 1863. II. Eleanor R. CHAPTER IV.

SOLDIERS FROM MARSHFIELD WHOM I HAVE INTERVIEWED CONCERNING THEIR PERSONAL EXPERIENCES AND OBSERVATIONS IN THE CIVIL WAR.

CHARLES S. PETERSON.

"I enlisted Aug. 8, 1862, and was in camp at Lynnfield till the 26th, when we broke camp and started for Baltimore; arrived there on the 28th and went into Camp Belger. Then to Camp Cram. We could hear heavy fighting not far away, so the pickets had very strict orders; and one night I halted one on Powhattan bridge. It was no cross for him to use profane language, so you may judge there was a lively time for a while; but finally the officer of the day came and passed him in. The following day he admitted he was wrong. I was appointed orderly sergeant, and being short of a base drummer, I was coaxed to act as such, although a novice in the business. We left Camp Cram and marched to Camp Emery, about one mile from Baltimore. We broke camp there the 7th day of November, with the snow seven inches deep, and I did not get into quarters until one o'clock the next morning. The 8th we started for Fortress Monroe; remained at Hampton Roads till Dec. 4th. We started aboard the Baltic, the largest ship afloat, with 17 other transports, said to contain 18,000 men, with sealed orders to steer due East till out of sight of land, and to keep together.

"While going out between Cape Charles and Henry, there came a terrible storm, and the next morning there was only two in sight, and one of those was disabled. We anchored at New Orleans, Jan. 1, 1863. On the 6th of March we went to Baton Rouge, where we landed, the comrades scattered in all directions. Was on the levee when Gen. Banks rode down and wanted to know where my band was. I told him I could answer for one and I supposed the others were about the city, somewhere. He said, what are we going to do. I want to get them together and march them to their quarters. I told him I could start the drum and that would bring them. He said, 'That is it; give it to her;' and it was very funny to see the soldiers running from all directions.

"We started for Port Hudson the 13th, and we were ordered to take only the top rails of the fence to do our cooking. After one was taken the next became the top, and none were left. We were to attack Port Hudson in the rear and the gun boats in front and run by the fort. Two ran by, but the rebels fired red-hot shot into the steam frigate Mississippi and set her on fire. I climbed a tall oak tree and I could see her when her magazine blew up. It was the most splendid display of fireworks I ever saw.

"On the 11th we started toward Centerville. Gunboats were shelling the woods, each side of the bayou, and the cavalry scouting in advance, the band being in the front. We were ordered to halt a short distance from a sugar house, and Gen. Banks rode up, and soon a cannon ball from the sugar house came over our heads and landed a long way in the rear, when the man that helped me carry the big drum, dropped everything and ran for dear life. Gen. Banks said to him, 'don't run, my man; don't run.' But there was no stopping him. The general turned to me and said, "I think we are a little too near. I guess we had better work back," and walked his horse beside me till we were out of range. Then our batteries came up and there was a fearful artillery duel. Finally we fired red-hot shot and set their breastworks, which were cotton bales, on fire, and they had to retreat. We camped on the field that night. The next morning we crossed the bridge that had been thrown across in the night; and the rebels gave us grape and cannister from the Diana, a gunboat they had taken from the United States, and one of our men dropped everything and ran, and for all I know he is running yet, for I never saw him after that.

"The battle raged the next day from daylight till dark. One shell killed eight of our Plymouth company. Wilbur Simmons of Crooked Lane was killed in that battle, the first hard battle we had.

"The band being part of the ambulance corps, I worked from morning until ten at night, carrying the wounded from the field, then helped the doctors dress the wounds all the rest of the night. Next day I told the officer of the day I wanted a rifle. I didn't want to fight any more with a bass drum, and I got it, too.

"The rebels left in the night. We started after them at daylight, and our advance and their rear was in action nearly every day for weeks. Finally we reached Alexandria on the 8th of May.

"One night I was on picket and the army went off and left me out, so finally I decided to leave my post without orders; took a small dugout and paddled down the bayou. There was a great shout when they saw me, for they thought I had been gobbled up by the rebs.

"On May 24 we came to the outskirts of Port Hudson. The next morning I was put near a bayou as sharpshooter. I saw a reb. crawl from a masked battery to the bayou for water, but I never saw him crawl back.

"Here was my first sight of colored troops under fire, and I never saw troops behave any better. They were deployed as skirmishers when this masked battery opened fire; but they charged and took it. It seemed to me that I had a presentment of what was going to happen, for our commanding officer lost his head completely. He went in on the charge (which was the first one on Port Hudson) but before we had gone far, he threw up his hands and exclaimed 'Oh my God, I am shot,' and fell over backwards with a bullet through his heart.

"The rebs had felled large trees and sharpened the limbs, so we had to charge on a roadway. They had a gun planted to rake that road with grape and cannister, but just as we started one of our shells tore one of its wheels to pieces and left it pointing about 45 degrees in the air.

"After we had dinner inside their breastworks we were ordered to lie down. One poor fellow, whose foot was in sight, had a bullet put through it. He got up and came across the road to me and said, 'Well, Peterson, I'm wounded,' as cool as though in his own parlor at home. I told him to crawl into the ravine and go to the rear in safety. He walked to the rear on that road, which I thought would be sure death to him. I have no doubt he had more than 100 bullets fired at him, but he is alive in Plymouth today.

"After we had silenced their cannon, a reb dare not show his head. I like a fool took my bayonet and dug some holes in the outside of their breastworks and climbed up and looked over, but I got down again pretty quick and laid behind a fallen tree. The only time we dared stand up was between two and three in the morning. There was a big shell burst over us, and a piece weighing about five pounds struck a comrade's shoe heel. It didn't hurt him, but scared him terribly. He jumped up and grabbed it and cried, 'I got a relic to carry home, now.' I told him to get down or he would never live to get home, much more than carry that great junk of iron to Vermont.

"I was a sharpshooter part of the time. The rebel sharpshooters were in trees, and after they had picked off some of our men, I could locate them by the smoke of their rifles. There was never anything did me so much good as to see them come down head-first, with their rifles, etc.

"The 13th of June we were going to make another charge at two in the morning. One young man wrote his name to put in all his clothes. Lieut. Holmes gave all his papers, watch, etc, to a friend and told him what to tell his wife. There had been fighting nearly every day for six weeks. The young man was killed on the breastworks, and Lieut. Holmes by my side, and soon after that Lieut. Russell, next to me, had his leg broken. I told him to crawl a short distance behind a hedge and he would be taken care of. Soon after that a large shell burst as it passed my legs and took my feet from under me very quick. When I fell it bent my bayonet across the muzzle of my rifle; but I clapped it on a stump, bent it back and soon caught up with my line, who had got ahead of the line of grenades; and we were ordered to lie down within a few feet of their breastworks. Our officer was standing up. I told him he had better get down, for he could do no good there with only a sword, and would get hit if he didn't. He said, 'the bullet wasn't made yet to hit him.' Just then a bullet went through the calf of his leg, back of the bone. He shook his sword at them and called them bad names.

"I didn't know I was wounded till three hours after, when a comrade saw the blood running over the top of my shoe. Then I began to look around. The shell had taken a piece off the back of my leg just enough to make it bleed good.

"The only time I ever disobeyed orders was while guarding a battery. An officer came and drew his sword and said in a very commanding tone, 'Peterson, go and draw your ration of whiskey.' I said, 'it was my duty to obey orders, but he had no right to give such an order, and I shall not go.' He immediately sheathed his sword and I had no better friend in the army after that.

"Port Hudson surrendered the 8th of July, and when we went in, a reb asked me if "I was the man he had seen on a large tree we had for a lookout.' I told him 'I was.' He said "he had fired at me more than a hundred times, but it is all over now and we are good friends."

“When the army started for Shreve’s Point, I was sent home sick on 60 day’s furlough, and was discharged Nov. 20, 1863.

CHURCH C. LAPHAM.

Enlisted in the Civil War, July 21, 1861. He enlisted as Constant C. Lapham, Co. E, Eighteenth Mass. Reg. Vol. Infantry as a drummer boy. Was in the seven day’s retreat in front of Richmond. Was in the battle of Gainé’s Hill, Va., and in the battle of Hanover Court House. Was discharged Jan. 19, 1863, for disability from the Philadelphia Hospital. Re-enlisted Feb. 10, 1864, in Co. F, 3rd Mass. Cavalry. Enlisted under his present name, Church C. Lapham. Engaged in the Battle of Winchester, Sept. 19, 1864. (A month before Sheridan’s ride.) Was wounded by a gunshot in the knee. Was discharged from the Baltimore Hospital, July 17, 1865. Enlisted first from Pembroke in Duxbury Co. The second enlistment was from Marshfield, but he was credited to Lynn, his native place, by some mistake. His name is on the roll of honor from Marshfield.

“Just before I was wounded we were charging the rebels, but finding we couldn’t carry their breastworks, behind which they were firing, we fell back, and, as I was about turning, I was shot. I was confined in bed in the hospital nine months, and for five months I could not change my position of my own volition.

“When I was wounded we (half a dozen of us) were removed to a shed, and some rebel women living near, claimed to be Unionists, so as to save their homes; the rebel women were really more hostile than the men. As we lay there in the shed, some of these women came to the doorway and taunted us, saying the rebels were marching here, and when they arrived they would burn the town, and, as a result, we would burn up in the shed, which was true, as not one of us could move to save our lives. We were so badly wounded. Every once and a while they would come up and pop their heads in to console us in that fashion. Finally, a colored boy popped his head in and one of our boys asked him to bring a few stones and a brickbat or two, and he did. Bye and bye one of these women popped her head in to torture us further by her taunts, crying the rebs were still coming. At that, the fellow threw the brickbat at her. She fled, and they ceased molesting us. It was but a short time before Sheridan was galloping down upon them on his famous ride. The advance of the rebs on Winchester was checked and the tide turned into a great rebel defeat. If they had succeeded in capturing and burning the town, these women would not have raised their hands to save us from burning to a crisp.

"On one occasion, as our company was marching by one of their homes, one of these women threw out of her chamber window the slops on the head of an Irishman in the company. He turned to her and cried, "And faith, I'll get even with yer." "Oh!" she replied, "no fear of that. I am well guarded; you can't harm me," and on the company marched.

"Some time after when our forces were in command here, as the company was marching away, that house was seen on fire, and soon burned to ashes. The poor woman rebel was seen sitting on a log nearby, watching the dying embers of her home.

"Some months after the discharge of our company and its return, I met that Irishman, and said to him, 'How do you suppose that house came to get afire?' "Oh!" said he, 'and faith if I don't know, nobody else does.'"

JUSTIN A. CARVER.

Enlisted in the Civil War Oct. 25, 1861, Co. C, 24th Mass. Reg. Vol. Infantry.

"We went first to Annapolis, then to Fortress Monroe, and then our company was sent to Cape Hatteras. We then went to Roanoke Island, where we engaged in the battle of Roanoke, a three-day's battle. I was detailed at night to go on board a gunboat to sail for Little Washington, N. C., where we drove the rebs away. After we landed at Roanoke, the rebs were drawn up in line to receive us and gave us 'Hail Columbia!' but we defeated them and took 2,000 prisoners. Gov. Wise of Virginia was killed in the battle. We then were sent to Newbern, N. C., and were engaged in a great battle there under Gen. Burnside, and succeeded in defeating the rebs. I was shot in that battle in the neck and fell. After a while I got up, and while our army was following up the fleeing rebels, I wandered about all day, endeavoring to find a hospital. We succeeded in finding a hospital tent, and the first night I had to sleep on corn stalks."

The bullet in Mr. Carver's neck or throat could never be extracted. It has been there 40 years, and he has never been able to speak clearly since the day he was wounded.

In giving me this narrative recently, he was not able to speak but little above a whisper, in a husky tone.

"When we went to Cape Hatteras in a gunboat, the tide was very low, and the boat could not move. We were short of water and all we were allowed was a pint a day for our coffee. We could not get cold water to drink for three weeks, and the rebs were planning to capture us while stuck in the mud, but did not succeed. I was discharged from Massachusetts Hospital Oct. 25, 1862."

ALBERT HOLMES.

Enlisted Aug., 1862, Co. K, 38th Reg. Mass. Vol. Infantry. Went to Baltimore, then to Fortress Monroe. Embarked for New Orleans under Gen. Banks.

“Was in the battle of Patterson, La., and won the battle. Our next battle was at Port Hudson; attacked the rebel breastworks. Major Redmond of New Bedford was killed. We ought to have taken the port the first day under Gen. Banks, but did not. We made two assaults. After the fall of Vicksburg, the garrison at Port Hudson surrendered.

“The artillery in the rear fired over our heads, and at night they often shot over us, but we got so used to it, we slept right along and never woke.

“The Red River expedition was a tough one. We did lots of marching, but met with no success. We engaged in the battle of Cane River. We came back to Washington and joined Gen. Sheridan’s army in the Shenandoah Valley, Va. Was in the battle of Winchester. I was in the advance skirmish line. A skirmish line is a line of soldiers, stretched along, with each soldier from four to eight feet apart in line, and here we have to learn the bugle calls, as the line is stretched so far we cannot hear a call of the voice. When we are commanded to advance, the bugler has to give a particular call from his bugle, and when to halt, a different call and so on in all the changes ordered.

“On each side of me in the skirmish line were Privates Dodge and Pierce. Said Dodge to me, ‘Holmes, we shall be killed in this assault; I feel it.’ And sure enough in a few moments Dodge at my right fell, and so did Pierce on my left. Dodge was shot through the mouth and head and was killed. Pierce was shot through the breast, and as we were advancing, we, of course, could not stop to attend the wounded, and Pierce, as he lay there on the field, was shot again near the hip. He was soon removed to the hospital. I thought my turn would come next, but it didn't come. Gen. Longstreet commanded the rebel force.

"We next engaged in the battle of Cedar Creek, a big battle. I was present during the famous Sheridan's ride. We were under Gen. Wright at that time, when we were retreating. Our men would say, if Gen. Sheridan was here we would not retreat. We had come to a halt when Sheridan was on the way, and was forming to advance on the rebs again. All at once Sheridan was espied riding toward us, and a great hurrah and yells we gave as he came up. As soon as he got our lines ready, we charged upon the enemy with yells. They fled and we regained our lost position and continued to advance upon them.

"When it is said we charge an enemy with our bayonets on either side, either one side or the other breaks, it is rare that a line of soldiers will stand and have bayonets thrust into them; they will fall back. It is common on either side when charging the enemy for the soldiers to advance with yells. We had in some cases bad obstructions to march through. The rebs felled trees and placed them, inclined, in the ground, and pointed the limbs sharp, to hinder our advance. This was called 'battis,' and then our skirmish line passed through the woods, and it was surprising to see with what ease our mounted cavalry would march through them.

"We were engaged in the battle of Fisher Hill. The hillside was covered with large rocks, which made it difficult to reach. When laying in our camp above Winchester, we had to lay on the ground in tents, with snow knee deep. We could not lay quiet all night for fear of our feet and our backs freezing. We were situated in this way for a fortnight. We next advanced south to Savannah. After Gen. Sherman had completed the march to the sea, we returned, and the war was practically over. We in due time were honorably discharged."

ISRAEL CARVER.

"Enlisted in the Civil War, Sept. 2, 1862. Went to Newbern, N. C. Was posted on picket duty. Was in the battle of Kinston, N. C., and defeated the rebs. It was a great battle. We then engaged in battle at Whitehall, N. C.; 500 prisoners were taken. We next went to Goldsboro, and fought a great battle there under Maj. Gen. Foster and won. From Goldsboro, after the battle, we were ordered to Little Washington, N. C., and embarked in transports. Maj. Gen. Foster was commander of our forces. The rebels were planning to surround the General and his small force who were reconnoitering about there, and had nearly succeeded in capturing him and his force when we appeared on the scene and rescued them, routing the rebels. In one of our fights beyond Newbern we were defeated, and defeated by the inability and cowardice of our commanding officer, who was drunk. Had Gen. Foster been there we would have whipped them.

"On the steamer returning from Little Washington, on board of which was Gen. Foster, a ball was fired from a rebel battery, and struck the head of the berth from which the general had just risen. On the transport on which I was also returning another ball was fired from a rebel battery and struck a fellow close to me, tearing a gash on his arm, leaving the flesh hanging only by a slender thread, which the surgeon soon cut off clean, and amputated the arm. When a squad of us were lying on the battlefield, a cannon ball came whizzing along and struck close beside me. My comrade remarked, 'I am a good mind to take that home with me,' but I said, 'No, it will be too big a lug for us to carry on our marches,' and we left it. I was taken sick and sent to the hospital, and two men, laying each side of me, died. One was Nelson Gardner, son of Stephen Gardner of Sea View, for whom the (Marshfield) Sons of Veterans Post was named. He died of typhoid fever. I finally recovered. In one of the battles in which we were engaged, our line extended from the advance to the rear column, some 18 miles. We were obliged to be reviewed once in a while by the commanding officers, and there were 35,000 men passing in these reviews, and this was a small force compared to the army of the Potomac. I was discharged in July, 1863."

DAVID CHURCH.

For whom the Grand Army Post in Marshfield was named, (being the first Marshfield soldier killed in battle in the Civil War.) His record there has been furnished me by his daughter, Mrs. Richard Magoun.

"He was killed in the battle of Wilderness May 6, 1864. Enlisted in Co. E., 7th Regiment, Mass. Vols. He was shot and killed instantly, while the Union army was on the retreat. His body was never recovered, probably buried in a trench with hundreds of others. He was also engaged in the following battles: Williamsburg, May 6, 1862; Bottom Bridge, May 20, 1862; Fair Oaks, May 31, 1862; Malvern Hill, July 1, 1862; Antietam, Sept. 18, 1862; Fredericksburg, Dec. 11, 1862; Mary's Heights, May 5, 1863; Salem Heights, May 5, 1863; Gettysburg, July 1, 1863. Killed in the battle of the Wilderness May 6, 1864."

HENRY TOLMAN.

Enlisted at Marshfield May, 1861, under the first call for three years men. "I was mustered into the U. S. service at Taunton June 15th, and was assigned to Co. E., 7th Regiment, Mass. Vols. After serving three years I re-enlisted in Dec. 1863, to serve three years or during the war. During my service in the army I participated in the following battles: Williamsburg, May 6, 1862; Fair Oaks, June 1, 1862; the seven days' fight in the retreat from before Richmond; Antietam, 17th Sept., 1862; Fredericksburg, Dec. 13, 1862; and Gettysburg, July 3, 1863. In April, 1864, there being a call for volunteers for the navy, I was transferred to it. I served eight months in the navy, most of it on the Frigate Wabash. I participated in one fight in the navy, viz: the capture of Fort Fisher. I was discharged from the service the 5th of Sept., 1865, at Pensacola, Florida. I could repeat many incidents, but will confine myself to one or two. At the battle of Antietam our regiment did not come upon the field until later in the afternoon, when the fighting was about all over. We marched in and relieved a regiment who still occupied the ground that they had been fighting upon. Their dead still lay where they fell. By this time it was quite dark, and our men laid down among them. We had been in this position a short time when captain, now Colonel Oakman, gave me an order, to detail 6 men for picket duty. After turning over half a dozen men, I succeeded in getting 6 live ones. The enemy's pickets at dark were close to our lines, and we expected to renew the conflict in the morning, but they had fled during the night. At the second battle of Fredericksburg, the third day of May, 1863, our division under General Sedgwick, entered the city early on the morning of that day. About 11 a. m. we were ordered to move up the hill, known as Myry's Heights, at the foot of which was a large brick house surrounded by a bank wall, not over two and a half feet high. No one supposed for a moment that an enemy was concealed behind this low wall. Our regiment was marching by it, left flank, in columns of fours. Upon approaching this wall, when not over 50 yards from it, the enemy opened fire upon us. It came so sudden and unexpected that for a moment it threw us into a confusion; part of the regiment was going one way and part another. But this condition did not last long. The regiment following ours took in the situation at a glance, and going upon a double quick, was soon in a position to rake the wall with their fire, which soon compelled the enemy to drop their arms and surrender. Upon arriving at the summit of the heights, our company could muster but five men, four besides myself. I was at this time 1st sergeant of the company, and found myself in command, all of the commissioned officers being wounded. I am proud to say that the five men were all from Marshfield, viz: Geo. Crossley and his brother Edmond, Eathan Randall, myself and John M. Ford, who at that time was but a mere boy, but as good a soldier as Marshfield ever produced. He had a very close call, a ball having passed through his cap, slightly grazing his scalp. Of the five men referred to, Ford and myself are the only survivors."

LUCIUS THOMAS.

Enrolled Sept. 2, 1862, in Co. F., 43rd Regt., M. V. M., at Readville; discharged July 30, 1863.

"We took passage on board transport Merrimac, for Newbern, N. C., Nov. 15. Our regiment was in the battle of Kinston, Dec. 14, 1862. Was in the battle of Whitehall, Dec. 16; in battle of Goldsboro, Dec. 17; in the battle of Blount's Creek, April 9, 1863, and in a number of other short marches.

On March 31st, as we were on dress parade, a ball came over our heads from a field in front of the parade grounds. The colonel told the officer of the guard to stop that shooting. He went out and arrested the chaplain of the regiment, Jacob M. Manning, of Boston. He was marched to the colonel's tent just as we broke ranks, we all following him. He hoped all orders from headquarters would be obeyed as promptly as that one. Think it must have been Rev. Jacob M. Manning, who years ago was widely known as the pastor of the Old South Church."

JAMES E. BAKER.

Enlisted in Co. F., 43rd Regt., M. V. M., Sept. 2, 1862, for 9 months; discharged July 30, 1863. Term expired. Enlisted 2d time July 21, 1864, to serve 100 days. Discharged Nov. 14, 1864. Term expired. Fought in battle of Kinston, Whitehall and Goldsboro, N. C., Dec. 13, 15, and 17, 1862.

JOHN H. EAMES.

Although not enlisting in the Civil War from Marshfield, Mr. Eames is so prominently identified with Marshfield as Commander of the G. A. R. Post for some years, and one of the "fathers" of the town, we need not offer any excuse in including his name among the soldiers in this history.

Mr. Eames enlisted at Medford in the Lawrence Light Guard, Co. E., 5th Mass. Minute Men, April 15th 1861, for 3 months. Participated in the first battle of Bull Run. Discharged July 31, 1861. Re-enlisted as first sergeant for three years in Co. C., 39th Mass. Infantry Vols., Aug. 15, 1862. Discharged as first lieutenant June 20, 1865. Participated in the various battles of the Army of the Potomac, under Gen. Grant, in the 5th army corps. Was taken prisoner of war, with the entire regiment, at the battle of the Weldon R. R., August 19th, 1864, and confined at Libby, Belle Isle and Salisbury Prisons, N. C. Is now, with one other, the sole survivor of the 18 members of his company who were captured. Released from prison Feb. 25, 1865. Became a resident of Marshfield in the spring of 1886.

JUDSON EWELL.

Enlisted in Co. G., 2d District of Columbia Vols., and joined the Army of the Potomac, Gen. Fitz John Porter commanding. He fought in the battle of Antietam, Sept. 17-18, 1862, and engaged in minor battles during his stay in the Army of the Potomac. His regiment was prominent in watching for the famous guerilla, Mosby, and his band. Was promoted to sergeant in his company. The latter part of his service he joined the 2d Regt., Dist. Columbia Vols., band. He was discharged in Oct., 1865.

WARREN F. WHITE.

Enlisted Aug. 7, 1864. Discharged June 7, 1865. Co. M., Capt. Driscoll, Third Mass. Heavy Artillery.

“In our voyage out to Fortress Monroe, nearly every one of the soldiers were seasick, except myself and the crew. I was accordingly put on guard, and all of the sick ones were put down the hole of the transport, and not allowed above deck. It was pitiful to see the soldiers put their hands up on the edge of the hatchway and try to climb up above, but my orders were not to allow anyone to get up, and I was obliged to prick some of their hands pretty sharp with my bayonet before they would loosen their grip and drop. Some of them cried out to me that they had marked me and would give it to me (meaning to shoot) when they landed. But I was obliged to obey orders, and I was never harmed.

“While on guard about the camp, there was a soldier who had been imbibing a little, and was making himself pretty noisy on the railroad track. Finally the commanding officer ordered me to arrest him. I obeyed, and brought him to the guard house, and not a great while after, I saw him draw a sharp knife across his throat, and then again, before we could reach him. He bled to death in a few minutes.

“I was ordered, with one or two others, to go back and pick up stragglers during our march. We picked up half a dozen dead soldiers, who had been shot and robbed.

"We were on picket duty, and ordered to let no one pass through the lines. During the night somebody in rebel uniform tried to get through. Notwithstanding the warning, he persisted, and was shot through both hips.

"We were on guard about the earthworks around Washington, and was present when Lincoln was assassinated.

"We saw what we supposed was Wilkes Booth and his accomplices pass us on horseback, while on guard, but not knowing of the assassination at that moment, (so soon after the event,) we did not of course stop him, but if we had known it, we could easily have arrested him then and there."

W. W. RANDALL.

Enlisted May 7, 1861, for three years. Discharged Nov. 27, 1862.

"We spent the autumn and winter on the Potomac, opposite Washington, drilling and studying the art of war. Took part in the advance on Mannasas where the Quaker guns were found. From Alexandria I went to Fort Monroe and took part in the siege of Yorktown. From Williamsburg we advanced to the Chicahominy River. From Gaine's Hill we were ordered to reinforce the troops at Hanover Court House, but we got there only in time to bury the dead and get a good crop of 'Rebel gray backs' from some rebel camps we stepped into.

"At the beginning of the seven day's retreat from the 'Peninsula,' our regiment with our troop of cavalry and one battery of artillery were detached and sent to White House Landing on the Pannunky River to cover the retreat of the hospital and stores there; we made this forced march partly at the double quick, in six hours, twenty-four miles, with the rebel cavalry chasing us. We ran through the woods, and when fatigued enough to drop, we fell down to rest a moment until the cavalry were approaching us again, then we jumped up and ran for our lives until fatigued enough to drop. Had the rebs known we had so small a force, they could have captured us easily, but they thought we were in larger numbers and feared getting entrapped, hence did not dare to approach too near. We rejoined the army at Harrison's Landing on the James River, just in time to help the baggage trains out of the mud. My bed that night was two chestnut fence rails, laid side by side, to keep me out of the 'sacred soil,' which was very liquid at that time.

"Our march from Harrison's Landing to Newport News, and then by transport to Aqua Creek Landing was uneventful; also the march from there to Bull Run.

"During the first day's fighting at Bull Run (Gen. Fitz John Porter commanding), we lay idle just in sight of the battle. Early next morning we were ordered forward, without any breakfast. I managed to slip the rear guard, and make a fire, cooked my coffee and ate my hard tack, and then followed on and joined my command just as they were forming in line for battle.

"During the charge through the woods and across the open field beyond, I fell with a rifle ball through my neck, a spent ball loosening my teeth, and a fragment of a shell which fractured my skull. I lay there on the field helpless from Saturday p. m. until Monday night, when I crept off the field. While laying there Saturday evening, it began to rain. I got hold of two rubber blankets that were in reach of me and was trying to make a bed of one of them, with a rebel shoe for a pillow, when a rebel soldier came along and wanted one of the blankets and offered to get me a woolen one for it; he took it and went away and came back with a whole armful of woolen blankets, and fixed me a nice bed of them, and covered me up with the rubber blanket. If that man is alive and ever sees this I hope he will make himself known to me. From there I rode in an ambulance to Centerville, and from there to Fairfax Station, from there I had a reserved seat on top of a box freight car, into Washington, where I arrived Tuesday night. I had nothing to eat from the time I was wounded until Tuesday noon, when I got to Union Chapel Hospital. On Tuesday night I had my wounds dressed for the first time, and learned that I had a fracture of the skull, which the nurse discovered while trying to wash the blood from my hair. I did not know until then that I had been hit there.

“My friends at home saw my name among the killed at Bull Run.

“One incident at the hospital is fresh in my memory. My wound in the neck was a peculiar one, and the surgeons at the hospital use to bring visiting surgeons to my cot to see it. One day the chief surgeon, Dr. Butler, said to me, ‘Randall, why didn’t that shot kill you?’ I made some reply to it. Then he said (he was rather a profane man at times.) By ——, I am going to hang you.’

“I remained there until Nov. 27, when I was discharged from the service and sent home, arriving at home in time to eat Thanksgiving dinner at Wm. Harrington’s.

“Some time after the close of the war I attended a war lecture in one of our churches in East Marshfield, given by an ex-soldier, who was in my company when wounded, and he remarked to the audience, ‘there is a soldier sitting in front of me (pointing to where I sat), who I saw fall in that battle in front as we were charging the enemy. After he fell, I thought probably he had stubbed his toe and fell, and shouted to him as I stepped over his body as we passed along, 'Come, Randall, get up!' and on we went and there lay Randall, as I ascertained later, unconscious, almost dead on the ground behind us.' "

JAMES L. ROGERS.

Enlisted July 9, 1864, Co. D, Forty-second Regiment, Mass. Vol., Capt. Samuel Waterman. Discharged Nov. 11, 1864.

Mr. Rogers enlisted first in 1861, and drilled with his company, but being a minor, his father objected to his going, and the latter obtained the consent of the captain to his withdrawal.

Mr. Rogers in the last enlistment went with his regiment to Alexandria, serving four months in the army. He was on guard duty most of the time around the vicinity of Washington and Alexandria. During his duties there they arrested a "bounty jumper." He had been guilty of jumping the bounty a dozen times or more. He was court-martialed, proven guilty and sentenced to be shot. The company was placed in line in a sort of hollow square, and a half dozen men were detailed to march in front for the execution.

The deserter was handcuffed and placed by the side of his coffin and marched around the hollow square in view of the company, and when arrived at the spot for execution, he was seated on his coffin in a position that when shot, he would fall into it. In every other one of the guns of the detailed men was a blank cartridge, and the other half the guns were loaded. At the command to shoot, the work was done and the prisoner dropped dead and back into his coffin.

Mr. Rogers was taken seriously sick and sent to a tent hospital, where it could hardly be said that he was encouraged to see the physician place above his cot a card announcing him among the dangerously sick, which meant he was liable to die at any moment, but he recovered and joined the army again. When recovering there was another soldier very sick near him, who had a high fever. He bathed daily his head, and one morning they found him missing, and after a while, not far from the hospital tent was found a cask of water, and there they saw his feet projecting out of the cask and his head in the water. They suppose during his high fever he must have escaped out of the tent to get water to drink, or to drop his head in the water to cool off, and fell into the cask and was drowned.

PELEG SHERMAN.

Enlisted Sept. 1, 1862. Engaged in the battle at "White Hall," also in battle at "Young's Cross Road," and one at Kinston. It became necessary at one time to go in transports, loaded with provisions, etc., to Little Washington where Gen. Foster, their commander, was stationed, and to do this it was requisite to run the blockade. The commanding officer asked for volunteers, and as no one seemed to respond, he asked Mr. Sherman if he would not go. He told him finally he would go if he would allow him to pick thirty men from the force. The commander acquiesced, and the men were selected. Fifteen were placed in one boat and fifteen in another, and they started off in their transports to run the blockade under the charge of Mr. Sherman.

In one of their engagements they drove the enemy from their stronghold, which they evacuated after Sherman's force had captured some forty prisoners, who were conveyed to a place of safety.

As Sherman's transports approached the blockade in the stillness of the night, the commander of a gunboat offered to approach the fort on one side and draw their fire on them, to allow Sherman's transports to pass the blockade; and they were successful in running it without a shot hitting them. And still another blockade they were obliged to pass before they could get through. Another gunboat commander offered to go up one side and draw the fire from the fort upon them. This was accomplished, and Sherman's transports passed through successfully without a shot injuring them. They reached their destination after the hazardous passage and unloaded the supplies to the great pleasure of the force stationed at Little Washington.

One of the officers on duty ordered him to proceed to a certain place with his men. He told him he would not and was arrested for disobedience of orders; but when this officer found he had another order from a superior officer, he was released to carry out the latter's order.

He was then ordered to return with his transports and men to Newbern and report back after the completion of his trip.

On his arrival at Newbern, he reported to Gen. Foster, the general commanding, and said to him that his orders were to return and report back there. "By whose orders?" he inquired. "General ——," he replied. "Well," the general commanded, "you need not return: you may remain." After that he was appointed "color bearer" in place of Mr. Clapp of Scituate and continued at this post.

JOSEPH SHERMAN.

Enlisted Sept. 2, 1862, Co. F, Forty-third Regiment, M. V. M. Discharged March 3, 1863, for disability from rheumatism and disease of the heart.

"I went on the Goldsboro expedition; also was engaged in the battles of Kinston, Whitehall and Spring Bank."

JOHN F. HATCH.

Enlisted Sept. 2, 1862. Discharged July 30, 1863.

"From Readville we were sent on the steamer 'Merri-mack' with five hundred men belonging to the Forty-sixth Regiment. In all there were nearly fifteen hundred soldier boys, and another steamer, 'Mississippi,' had the same number.

"We remained in Boston Harbor five days on account of a severe storm. Most of the boys were seasick. We went to Beaufort, N. C.; from there went to Newbern, N. C. We marched quite a distance and took quarters in large barracks. We were united with the Twenty-third, Seventeenth, Forty-fifth and Fifty-first Massachusetts Regiments and First Division Eighteenth Army Corps.

“At Newbern we had company drill, regimental drill and brigade drill on broad plantations surrounding our camp.

“Was in three engagements: battle of Kinston, Whitehall and Goldsboro. We were held as reserve. In one of the battles we laid flat on the ground, for the bullets were whizzing a few feet above us. If we had remained standing we would have suffered severely. Our march was a long and weary one. We had nearly forty pounds to carry, including all the equipments. It was trying for boys from eighteen to twenty years of age.

“Comrade Thomas P. Ford, a stout, rugged man of thirty-five or forty years, was obliged to fall out, overcome by weariness, and we young boys took turns by carrying his equipments in addition to our own on that long march. Our brigade lost in the battles of that march, thirty-five killed and one hundred and forty-four wounded.”

FREDERIC H. EWELL.

“Enlisted Feb. 22, 1864. Was in Camp Wool, Worcester, until some time in April, when we were ordered to the front. First battle was the ‘Wilderness,’ May 5 and 6; second battle, Spottsylvania, May 8 and 12; third battle, Cold Harbor, June 3; fourth battle, Petersburg, June 18.

“We left Camp Wool, Worcester, with a full regiment of 1020 men, and on June 19, in front of Petersburg, but thirty-seven men answered the ‘roll call.’ The highest officer was a lieutenant. Laid in front of Petersburg until March, 1865. During that time was in several small engagements.

"The explosion of the mine occurred July 30. Was in attack on Weldon Railroad, Aug. 18, and others. Was taken prisoner of war during one attack about one o'clock at night, but favored by the darkness escaped before morning. I escaped by watching my opportunity, and when I saw the chance, I jumped over the wall of the fort, right among the rebels, but being dark they did not observe my movements, and in a short time I escaped from their lines and passed into ours—our forces being near. In the space of four hours from my capture I was back in the Union lines, fighting in front of Petersburg. We drove the enemy back. A lot of the rebels, by strategy, gave themselves up to a small force of ours, and then turned against our Union pickets and took them prisoners.

"In the battle of the Wilderness, on the 5th and 6th of May, our company, G, went in with fifty-six men and came out under fire with only fifteen of us remaining.

"Was in the attack on Fort Steadman, March 25, 1865. Was in battle two days, April 2 and 3, when Petersburg was captured. Was in attack near Appomattox Court House, April 9, when "Lee Surrendered."

"I served in the war as a sharpshooter. Had my boots stolen from under my head while asleep on the ground. Was obliged to go barefoot several days.

"Had a bullet shot through my knapsack while lying on the ground, face down. Had another shot through my clothes under my arm.

"Was on duty at Washington about three months waiting to be mustered out. Mustered out in August, 1865, some time after the war closed."

I. ALONZO EWELL.

"Enlisted in the United States service as a sharpshooter in Co. K, Fifty-seventh Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry, Feb. 19, 1864, to serve three years, or during the war.

"April 18, 1864, the regiment was marched out of Camp Wool, Worcester; reached Baltimore April 20. At Washington our regiment was reviewed by President Lincoln. Participated in the battles of the Wilderness, May 5-7, 1864; Spottsylvania, May 8-18, 1864; Poplar Springs Church, Va., Sept. 30, 1864, and at Boylston Plank Road, Oct. 27, 1864. Discharged Dec. 28, 1864, by reason of a surgeon's certificate of disability.

"The Fifty-seventh Regiment, to which we belonged, had the largest number of men killed in battle of any Massachusetts regiment."

ANDREW L. DAMON.

Enlisted in the navy, June, 1864. Discharged Aug., 1865. Went in the steamer "Fort Donaldson." She was a "blockade catcher."

"We came near being shipwrecked off Cape Hatteras. The waves washed over us, and to save ourselves we were obliged to throw our goods overboard; and a number of cannon were thrown over. We bombarded Fort Fisher. There were sixty-seven war vessels and others in the attacking line. The fort surrendered to our force. We then sailed for Mobile."

HENRY P. OAKMAN.

"Mustered into the United States service as a volunteer in the Thirty-eighth Regiment, Massachusetts Infantry, on Aug. 12, 1862. Discharged for disability at Boston, Oct. 27, 1863. Went into camp at Lynnfield, Mass., leaving for the front on the 26th of August.

"I beg leave to say that patriotism ran high with many of the Marshfield people at the time that I enlisted, and some who could not go to the front in person, helped to encourage and help the "boys" in other ways.

"I prize very highly a legal bond, which is now in my safe, given me by Geo. M. Baker of Marshfield, assuring me that in case of any casualty should befall me on the field of battle or otherwise while in the line of duty, that my wife and two children should be provided for, so long as he had the means to care for them, should assistance be required.

"From Lynnfield, on our way to the front, our first camp was at Baltimore. Co. K, of which I was a member, was detailed to guard Stuart's mansion of cavalry fame.

"On several occasions Capt. Slade borrowed my seven shooter before going down town of an evening. One evening, as we were sitting around the parlor table studying military tactics, he called for the pistol and asked me if I had oiled the cylinder, to facilitate the revolving. I illustrated with the muzzle pointing under the table, when to my surprise, my thumb slipped and a bullet entered a lieutenant's leg at the knee and lodged in the ankle. My head began to swim, foreseeing in imagination dire consequences, when the captain whispered in my ear, "I wish that you had blown his brains out." My head settled immediately.

"During the first week of November we had marching orders. Embarking in due time on ocean transports, halting in Hampton Roads for some weeks, taking shore exercise by companies, spending Thanksgiving with the 'Baltic,' still at anchor near the 'Rip Raps.'

"On Dec. 8, the fleet, led by the 'Atlantic,' passed between the "Rip Raps" and Fortress Monroe, with the Stars and Stripes gayly flying, proceeding, not without some tempestuous weather, (which threw many of the officers' horses off their feet,) in a southerly direction, until we neared Ship Island, where we disembarked in boats about the 14th of December.

"Christmas was passed on the island, and in accordance with a military custom, the camp was turned over to the regiment, the men to choose their own officers, and to take entire command under the usual conditions.

"The day was very hot, but it passed off very enjoyably to all concerned. Many of the regular officers had to be reprimanded, some courtmartialed and some put in the guard house; but on the setting of the sun, the mock court ended and they were released and again resumed their regular command.

"On the 1st day of January we sailed up the Mississippi, between large orange groves loaded with oranges and blossoms to Carrolton, where we arrived on the 19th. We were encamped at Carrolton several weeks, during which time some drilling and some foraging was indulged in. When requested to pay spot cash for fowl or turkeys, we pleaded inability on account of our light marching order, but promised faithfully to pay when we came back.

"We reached Baton Rouge, La., the first week in March. On the 12th the division consisting of thirteen regiments of infantry, three batteries and several companies of cavalry were received by Gens. Banks and Emery, accompanied by a large and brilliant staff on the old battlefield at Baton Rouge. While crossing a bayou on a pontoon bridge, the rebs had our range and were trying to get the distance. The first shot fell short; the second shot went over; the third shot struck a gun carriage and knocked it and the four horses off into the water.

"The battle of Bisland lasted all day. A footprint on the soil, made by the narrator, was partly destroyed by a solid shot in passing, but the foot was uninjured, as that instant it was raised. As darkness came on we took shelter in the dry ditches in the canefields.

"During the night the enemy retreated, burning the bridge behind them, and encamped on the other side of the bayou. The question was 'how can we follow' I told the commanding officer that if I could have two hundred men I would build the bridge from the cooling troughs and other materials from a near-by sugar house, so that men, artillery etc. could cross before night. He offered me 1,000 men. The bridge was built and the troops were in pursuit before night.

"During our march toward Port Hudson, the heat was so great and the sun strokes so many, that the surgeon ordered rest in the day time and marching in the night.

"The outer works of Port Hudson were attacked on the 27th day of May, and continued through the 28th. Lieut.-Col. Rodman was shot through the heart, as he arose to respond to an order that the narrator transmitted to him from the general in command. About three hundred guns opened in bombarding Port Hudson on the morning of the 13th, and continued until one o'clock a. m. of the 14th, when the division, with the Thirty-eighth in advance, made an assault which was confidently expected to result in the capture of the fort. While in line of battle on the brow of a hill, the light of the moon exposed us to view to the shot and shell flying from the fort. The Thirty-eighth Regiment lost one-third of the regiment in killed and wounded in the space of twenty minutes. We were repulsed, and were ordered to 'lay down,' which order was promptly executed. We remained there several days be-tore a truce was agreed upon. when the rebels came out and gathered up the dead and wounded to a certain line, and allowed us to gather in the balance, and to do all the burying, which was done in ditches containing fifty or more bodies each.

“On the morning of the 8th an order from Gen. Banks was given to all the regiment commanders, stating that Gen. Gardner had proposed a cessation of hostilities with a view to settle upon terms of surrender, provided that the rumor of the 7th, that Vicksburg had fallen was true.”

Gen. Gardner surrendered unconditionally. The active military service of the narrator ended with the siege of Port Hudson. He having been disabled, was taken to the hospital in Baton Rouge, where he remained several weeks, and came home on a furlough of sixty days, on expiration of which he received an honorable discharge.

ALBION HATCH.

“One morning about the middle of July, 1862, twenty-three Marshfield boys, averaging about twenty years of age, piled into Charles T. Hatch’s stage coach, and rode to Quincy, and there took the cars for Boston, to be examined as volunteers in United States service. Twenty-two were accepted and went from there to Lynnfield, where we were assigned to Co. K., 38th Regt., Mass. Vols., and were sworn into service Aug. 21st, 1862. We left camp the 26th and went to Baltimore by cars and boat, crossing from Camden to Philadelphia. We went up to the famous John

Cooper eating house and had supper about midnight. From there we went to Baltimore. We marched up Pitts street, where the Sixth Mass. Regt. was fired into when they went out, but we were not molested, and we soon arrived at camp, called Camp Belger. At this camp Col. Ingraham took command of the regiment Sept. 5th, Co. K. We were detailed for guard duty at Stuart's Hospital. Here I saw the first rebel prisoners, and I called them slim specimens. We remained here three weeks, and then joined the regiment at Camp Cram, near a bridge where Stonewall Jackson was expected to come on his way to Pennsylvania, but he stopped at Antietam, and they gave him a warm reception. Then we had orders to move to Chambersburg, went a few miles, then orders to return. Went into camp at Camp Emory, where we were brigaded with the 128th and the 175th New York and the 31st Mass., and left the 9th of November on the steamer Baltic for New Orleans with twelve companies of troops. We left seven of the twenty-two at Baltimore, six were discharged, and one, Josiah Stoddard, passed to the better land. At Fortress Monroe we saw the 'Cheese box on a raft,' that beat the rebel ram Merrimac, which was going to whip the world. The 8th of December we started South in Gen. Banks' expedition, and reached New Orleans the last day of the year, 1862. Went into camp at Carrolton, seven miles outside of New Orleans. Here we remained in camp and drilled. We made a two days' trip on a steamer, 110 miles, to Plaquemine. When we got back, we found the report current that we were all gobbled up by the rebs. Our next move was made the 8th of March, to Baton Rouge, and on the 13th we went to the rear of Port Hudson to draw the attention of the rebs from the Mississippi river, so that our gunboats could pass the fort and go up the river. At this time the gunboat Mississippi was blown up, giving us a good scare. After this we went down the river again and landed at Algiers. There we packed up our baggage and took the cars for Brasher City, crossed the river on the Clinton to Berwick. Here the doctor run the regimental knife again, and five more of the Marshfield boys were left behind. That night we camped near the river, and the next day, the 13th of April, found us in our first battle, the battle of Bisland. At this battle we lost the captain of Co. K., Capt. Gault, and one private. The country was swampy land, with ditches about two rods apart. Being dry we went from one to another, and they were filled with blackberry vines loaded with large, luscious berries, all ripe; but not for long, for as we halted we Marshfield boys knew where to put them, if we did not have pails. I watched my chance to disable the enemy by shooting at the horses. I remained here till dark, when the firing ceased and we rested till morning, and while we rested the enemy left. The next morning we advanced to their fortifications and found them empty, so from there we kept on for our first destination, Alexandria, on the Red river. All the way we foraged for our living, and we did not grow lean, either. Arrived at Alexandria the 8th, the gunboats had taken the place. Porter's fleet was there. Were on the road again for the Mississippi, at Morganza's Bend. Took boat, crossed the bayou, swung to right, formed line with cavalry around Port Hudson, and there we lay siege for forty-five days before the enemy surrendered. Those days must be lived to be realized. Tired, hot, thirsty, some wounded, some sick, some dead, all wishing we were victorious, but the 7th of July we had word Vicksburg had surrendered. The next day Gen. Gardner surrendered Port Hudson to Gen. Banks, thus opening the Mississippi river. We were ordered back to Baton Rouge, where we remained till March 23, 1864, then to Alexandria, on the Red River, again, where we joined the 13th, 16th and 17th corps, April 1st. Most of the troops went on steamer as far as Grand Ecore. The army had fallen back to this place. The 21st received marching orders for Alexandria. That day we marched forty-five miles, and came on the enemy. We drove them, and came back to the river and remained all night. The 11th of May marched to where the rebs blocked the river and robbed the mails. We found letters opened and thrown away; but we chased them till we reached Mansura Plain, where the finest battle of the campaign was fought, after which we went to Semmes port, and there took the transport for Algiers. Our next move was to board the steamer Karnack for Washington, where we were attached to the division commanded by Gen. Sheridan. We were put on board cars for Harper's Ferry, and our 38th Mass. was the first regiment to enter the Shenandoah Valley. In that valley we saw the hardest fighting of our campaign; the battle of Winchester, on the 19th of September. Fisher's Hill, the 22d. Then we drove the enemy 110 miles to Mt. Crawford; then went back to Cedar Creek, where the enemy surprised us, and we made history in the famous fight with 'Sheridan twenty miles away.' But when the little general, on his big black horse, literally turned to gray with foam and dust, came up, he inspired us all with new courage, and again we drove the rebels back, and at night camped on the same ground we had left in the morning, retreating in such a hurry. Not all could come back. Many were left on the field to be cared for as soon as they could be. At the battle of Winchester I got my first taste of the bullet. Within ten minutes I was hit twice, once in the shoulder and once in the leg. I thought the enemy was getting careless, but I did not have to fall out, only I was a little smarter than before. The battle of Cedar Creek wound up the fighting in the valley; the enemy was demoralized.

"Our regiment went back to Baltimore and was quartered in the stables. January 19th left for Savannah. We met Gen. Sherman, back from his march through Georgia.

“For the next three months I was on detached service with the supply train, but the regiment was on garrison duty. After Sherman at Goldsboro, N. C., came the news of the assassination of our beloved Lincoln. Was at the surrender of Lee and the capture of Jeff Davis. I saw the latter and his wife and two sons on their way to Fortress Monroe. Soon came the news of peace, and orders for us to strike tents and move for home. Never an order was so gladly obeyed. In a few days we were on our way, and the 12th of July, 1865, only five of the twenty-two Marshfield boys who went with our company to the seat of war lauded in Boston Harbor, myself being one of them.”

CHARLES F. PERRY.

“Enlisted July 12, 1862, Co. K, 38th Regt., Mass. Vol. Infantry. Discharged July, 1865.

“Went to Baltimore; located at Camp Belger. Then to Fortress Monroe. Thence to New Orleans. Camped at Carrollton, five miles above. First battle I engaged in was the battle of Bisland, April 12, 1863. We were deployed as skirmishers, and marched to Red river, Alexandria, under Gen. Banks. Returned to Baton Rouge, and then went to Port Hudson, twenty miles above, and remained in the swamp, four or five miles from Port Hudson. The general commanding said the object of the expedition had been ac-completed, and we returned to the neighborhood of New Orleans at Algiers, directly opposite. We did not at the time see that anything had been accomplished, but later on we found out. We crossed the river on the 20th or 25th of May. We began the siege of Port Hudson, which lasted forty-five days. We now learned the reason why we returned to the vicinity of New Orleans. It was because our general found out that a large body of the rebel soldiers were about to leave Port Hudson to reinforce the rebel soldiers at Vicksburg, and it would be easier for us to capture Port Hudson when the rebel garrison had been relieved of 15,000 soldiers. Hence our march, in a roundabout way, was to cut off the 15,000 rebs and get in between Port Hudson and Vicksburg, in order to check their return to the Port. On the fourth of July Vicksburg surrendered.

“Our army was so rejoiced we fired off all the cannon and guns, and the rebs in Port Hudson ran up a flag of truce, and asked what was the matter. We replied that Vicksburg had surrendered, which resulted in the surrender of Port Hudson. At the battle of Cane River, Levi Brooks, of Hanover, was shot at my side and killed. When Gen. Banks was ordered back from Grandicore to Cross Roads a battle took place there, and after our capture of the place, negroes of all descriptions, 2,000 of them, followed us to gain their freedom. They took with them their mules and carts and all their belongings that they could carry, and followed on, but when we came to a small river the poor fellows had to leave all they could not carry across in their arms behind, to keep up with us, but on they marched with our army across the Mississippi, and thence to New Orleans, where they were safe in their new-born freedom.

“When we defeated the rebs in the battle of Bisland, (and our regiment was the only Massachusetts regiment in that brigade,) Gen. Banks said to us, ‘Let Massachusetts be proud of her boys today.’ In that battle I had 48 cartridges at the beginning, and only one left at the close. As we passed through western Louisiana in our march, the negroes on the sugar plantations ran out to meet us and passed to us boxes of sugar and sweet potatoes, as we stepped out of the ranks to get them.

“We next went north to Shenandoah Valley, Va., where we engaged in the battle of Cedar Creek, when Gen. Sheridan took his famous ride from Winchester to Cedar Creek ‘twenty miles away.’”

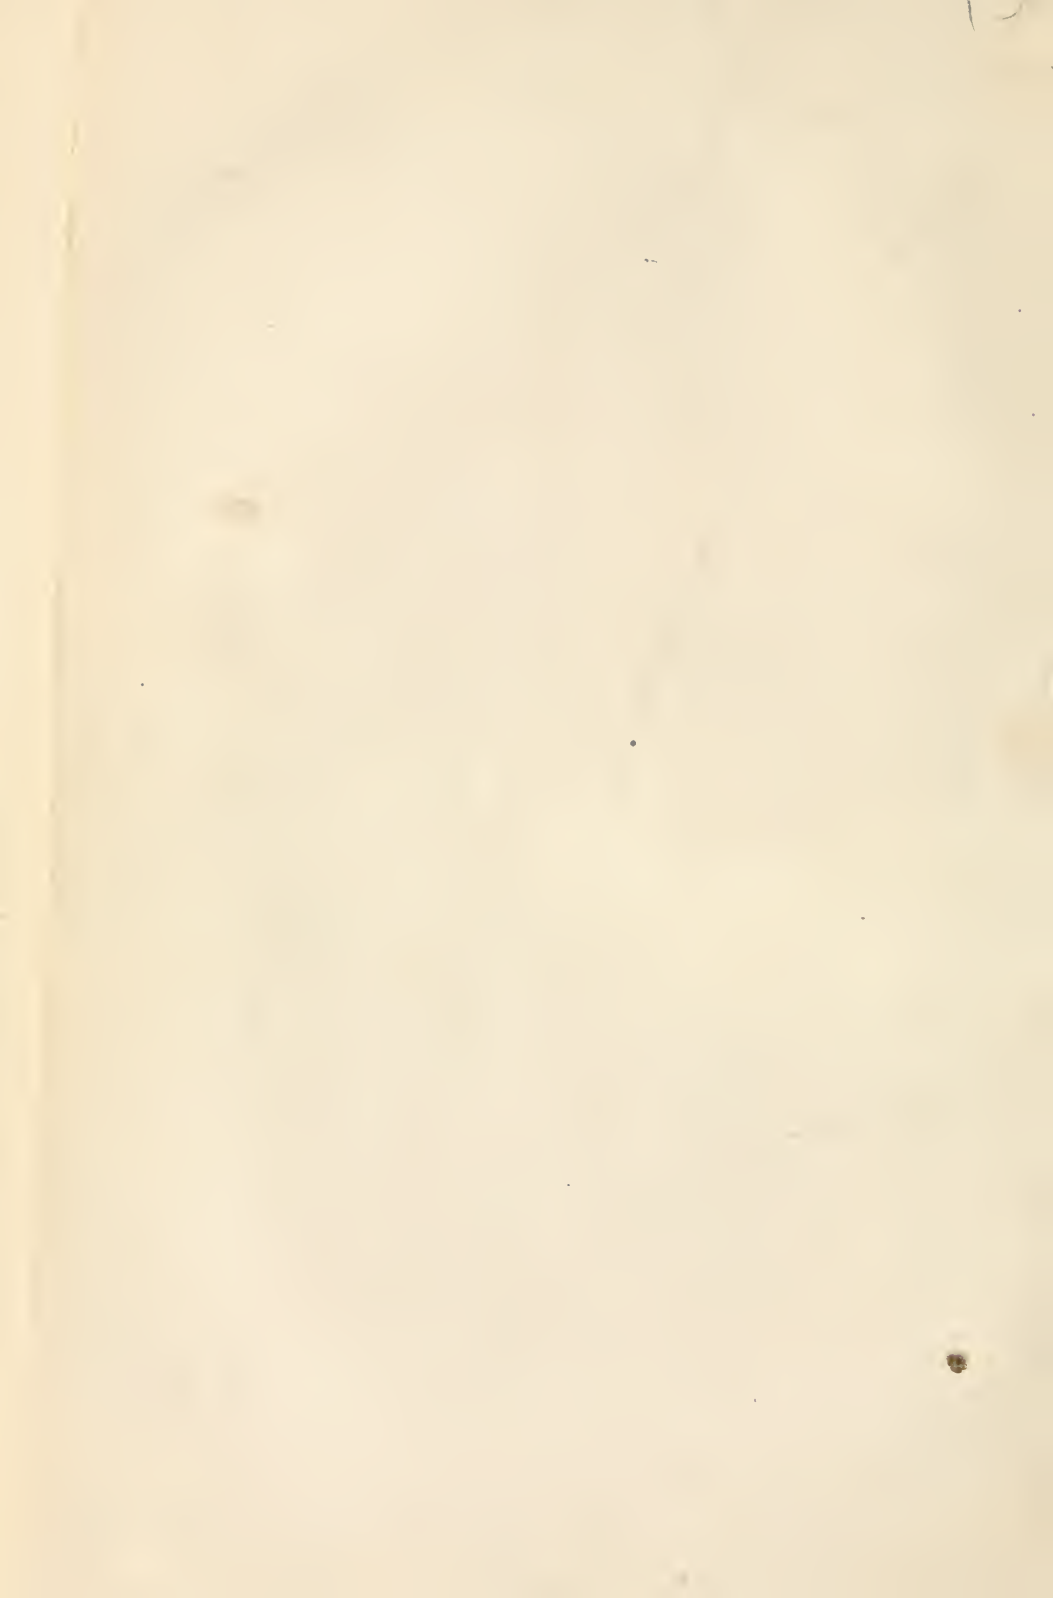

Mr. Perry, since he left the army, has become blind.
